THE INDIAN SUMMER.

A GENTLE spirit hovers now,
Around the mountain's lofty brow,
And nestling down 'mid valleys green,
By brooks and glens, yet all unseen,
It flings its warm and flushing dyes,
The gorgeous hues of Summer skies,
O'er lightest branch and covert rude,
To deck wild Nature's solitude.

It cometh from the sweet south-west,
The sunny forests of the blest,
With balling airs and golden light
To make the shadowy wood-paths bright,
And bring us back, with its calm skies,
The quiet light of cherished eyes.

When first the frost drop'd hoar from Heaven
Amid the holy hush of even,
The Summer blossoms bowed and died,
The fair and lovely side by side—
But here and there the Gentian stood,
By tang'led path and lonely wood,
With azure eye and fringed lid,
Among the matted grass-tufts hid.

And still the Sunflower, noddeth tall,
O'er ruined gate and garden wall,
Lifting its yellow blossoms high,
Each with serene and quiet eye,
To greet the sky, by glimpses seen,
The breaking storms and clouds between.

[illegible] w tenderly doth Nature throw
[illegible] r parting smile o'er all below,
[illegible] mournful beauty that endears.
Mid all of death, decay and tears,
For every sad and tender feeling,
Hath in itself a balm of healing—
[illegible] springing hope, a loving trust,
That consecrates our fading dust.

Sweet spirit of the tranquil West,
The weary wanderers dream of rest;
[illegible] aught of holy meaning lies
[illegible] eath sun-lit Autumn's fading guise.
[illegible] let fair Nature's tearless eye,
[illegible] ash in my heart the fear to die!

The beauty, healthfulness, quiet, and morality of the City render it a most desirable residence for those intending to pursue a course of study. The number of Boarders is limited. They reside in the family with the Principal and Teachers, who always feel a deep interest in the comforts of a pleasant home. A regular course of Study is pursued. Principal and Proprietor.
TARRYTOWN, Sept. 29, 1845.

The undersigned having been requested by Wm. P. Lyon, Esq. to attend the examination of the pupils of the Irving Institute, over which he presides, take pleasure in stating the high gratification they have derived from observing the remarkable proficiency of the pupils, and the evidences they have exhibited of a thorough, systematic and eminently successful course of instruction in all the branches of solid and polite education. While the minds of the pupils give such evidence of careful culture, some of the undersigned have had occasion through successive years to observe that their morals and manners are equally subject to a careful and judicious training, and to a system of discipline at once inflexibly rigid, yet paternal and kind.

In addition to the advantages which the Irving Institute possesses for the education of youth, on account of its eminently salubrious situation, the health of the pupils is systematically promoted by active exercises within the ample grounds of the Institute, part of which is fitted up as a gymnasium, by swimming or skating as the season invites, and by more extended rambles among the attractive scenery of the neighborhood.

With a confidence in the Irving Institute strengthened in most of the undersigned by prolonged observation, they are at once prompted by their feelings and by a sense of duty to commend it strongly to public consideration. Signed,

A FAMILY Boarding School for Boys.—Centrally situated in West Bloomfield, N. Jersey. Number of pupils limited at 20. DAVID A. FRAME, A. M. } Teachers
WILLIAM S. WARD, A. M. }

From the assurances of parents who have sons at this School, and of others, it is believed that it commends itself in an eminent degree to all acquainted with its details. The limited number of its pupils—its exclusion of all day scholars—the thorough preparation for College or business, which its pupils receive—the healthfulness and pleasantness of its location—the ample private play-grounds which surround and embellish it—the salutary moral influences which pervade and control it—the homelike comforts and attentions of the family circle, and the protection from all vitiating and corrupting influences—all combine to throw around this School special attractions for that class of parents, who care much for the solid intellectual improvement of their children, more still for their health and comfort, and most of all for their right moral training.
