THE TRIBUNE.

The Governor of Vermont on Peace.

Governor SLADE, in his recent message, thus speaks of this subject in response to a communication from the Peace Society: "It would seem necessary to do little more than to announce this object to secure for it the favorable consideration of the rulers of every Christian people. War is the greatest of all calamities that ever afflicted the human race; and yet the world, after having been involved in its crimes, and felt the terrific sweep of its desolations for near sixty centuries, seems but just awaking from the delusion, that it is necessary and consistent with the spirit and principles of a religion whose all pervading element is love.

Our own country, more perhaps than almost any other, needs this awakening influence. The freedom happily enjoyed by our people, seems to engender the restless spirit favorable to war, while it receives additional impulse from the popular appeals incident to our system of free suffrage—appeals made often by men who love distinction and excitement more than their country—while their appeals act on minds in no condition, from the association of numbers, and other causes, to feel their individual responsibility for the crimes and consequences of war.

While the spirit of peace, and a scrupulous regard to justice will, by their silent influence, check, if they do not entirely subdue, the spirit of aggression, they will not necessarily prevent the occurrence of international difficulties, nor in the present, if in any future state of the world, supersede the necessity of some formal provision for their adjustment. This necessity suggests a resort to the principle of ARBITRATION, and the introduction into treaties between nations, of stipulations to that effect.

It is to the furtherance of this object by acting on the public sentiment of our own country and the world, that the American Peace Society solicits the action of the General Assembly of this State; and I could hardly be invited to the performance of a more grateful duty, than to become the medium of asking your attention to it, and recommending, as I do, such action as may in your wisdom, most effectually lead the influence of this State in the furtherance of this great movement of peace on earth, and good will toward men.

I must be permitted to add an expression of the sense I entertain of the great value of the efforts of the friends of peace through the organization of peace societies, in dispelling the delusion so long prevalent in regard to war. The results, thus far, of the quiet and persevering efforts of these associations, have furnished a most gratifying illustration of the silent power of truth, in the hands of Christian benevolence, to reform and save the world."

These extracts are only a part of Governor Slade's noble testimony on Peace—the noblest ever yet uttered by any ruler. We deem the example worthy of all imitation.

MELANCHOLY.—We have the melancholy duty of announcing the death of Capt. J. C. Reed, of the U. S. Army, and late aid to Gen. Gaines, which took place at the United States Hotel in this City, about 4 o'clock yesterday morning. He arrived in the New-England from Cincinnati on Monday, and stopped at the United States Hotel; in the evening paid his bill and his fare to Philadelphia. He appeared melancholy and somewhat deranged. He went to his room but did not retire—persons lodging in the adjoining rooms heard him walking the room from the time he entered until the hour above named. He then appears to have deliberately taken his holster pistols from his trunk, locked it, and placing the muzzle of one of them to his right temple, snapped two caps, (as they were heard in the adjoining room, and mistaken for the snapping of coal in the fire.) A third time the pistol was discharged, the ball passing through the right to the left temple, and through the partition into the adjoining room. He fell instantly dead, without a groan.

He had a letter in his possession of recent date, from Gen. Gaines, accepting his resignation as one of his aids, and couched in the most flattering terms. He had also a sword presented to his father by the Legislature of N. York, for honorable service in the last war, and by his father presented to him in 1841. He had about 80 dollars of money with him and some bagage. He was aged about 35 years. [Wheeling (Va.) Times, 19th.

ONE-EYED SOLDIERS.—Dr. Durben, in his late valuable work entitled "Observations in the East," just published by the Harpers, says that in some parts of Egypt, to avoid the conscriptions of Mehemit Ali, the women have been in the habit, for years back, of maiming their children so as to unfit them for military service. The destroying of one eye was a common operation.—But the Pacha has taken an effectual way to put an end to this cruelty by forming two regiments of one-eyed soldiers. The evil is said to be already much diminished.
