Steamer Ben Franklin.—We visited last evening, in company with a number of our citizens, the splendid steamer now in exhibition at Commercial Exchange, Tchoupitoulas and St. Charles streets. We have seldom seen a more beautiful specimen of the art of ship building, and we have no doubt that the enterprising gentlemen who have brought her here will be well rewarded for their trouble and expense. The Ben Franklin is a model of beauty, and we have no doubt that she will be found equally fast. The fine group that adorns the stern, representing Ben Franklin and his family, is the work of Mr. Jones, the sculptor, and is a most beautiful specimen of the art. The ladies of Orleans will be pleased to learn that the Ben Franklin will be at the disposal of the ladies of Orleans, for a few days, for the purpose of visiting the steamer, and we have no doubt that the fair visitors will be pleased with the attention. We understand that the Ben Franklin will be placed on the Vicksburg and New Orleans line, and we have no doubt that she will be found a very fast boat, and a very pleasant one for passengers. We hope that the enterprising gentlemen who have brought her here will be rewarded for their trouble and expense, and we hope that the citizens of New Orleans will show their appreciation of the enterprise by a liberal patronage. We understand
