TILTON'S IMPROVEMENT to the VIOLIN.—This valuable Improvement may be added to any Violin, however old or weak, not only without injury, but with decided advantage to the strength of the instrument. As to the effect of the Improvement on the tone of the instrument, the following certificates will be more satisfactory to those interested, than anything we can say:

"I have examined a number of Mr. Tilton's Improved Violins, have tried them in my orchestra, and have no hesitation in saying that his attachment is a most valuable improvement, giving a brilliancy and quality of tone hitherto only acquired by age. W. T. ROBERTS, Musical Director, Broadway Theater."

"I have examined and tried Mr. W. B. Tilton's Improvement to the Violin, and am greatly pleased with it, and do not hesitate to pronounce it a real improvement, and one that may be added safely, and with great advantage, to an old or new instrument. U. C. HILL."

Just received per steamer Africa.

"LONDON, Dec. 17, 1851.

"Having been applied to to test the recent invention of Mr. W. B. Tilton for an improved method of constructing Violins and other musical instruments, we applied it to a Joseph Guarnerius Violin, valued at two hundred guineas, to an ordinary Violin and to a Tenor. The result was in each case satisfactory beyond our most sanguine expectations; it gives freedom, power, and brilliancy to the tone without interfering in any way with the external appearance of the instrument, and we have no hesitation in saying that it must be universally accepted.
EDWARD WITHERS & CO.,
Musical Instrument Makers to Her Majesty,
Coventry st., London."

Resolution passed at a meeting at the Apollo Rooms, of Professed Violinists, Amateurs and others, called for the purpose of testing the Improvement.

Resolved, That the meeting do heartily approve of the invention of Mr. Tilton and endorse its usefulness, its applicability to the violin, and the fact of its rendering the tone clearer, fuller, and of the quality and freedom of vibration, of an old and valuable Italian instrument.

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be given to Mr. Tilton for his kindness in presenting this valuable invention to the attention of the gentlemen present.

These resolutions were signed by the following
GEO. LODEK, W. T. ROBERTS,
U. C. HILL, HERR GRIEBEL, and many others.

Our price for adding the improvement is $10. To dealers in Violins we will make a discount when the instruments are improved at a time. This improvement may be added to Pianos, Violoncellos, Guitars, &c., with equal advantage. Improved instruments for sale, wholesale and retail. W. B. TILTON & CO., No. 19 Park Place. j10 3t*
