Just Published,

THE RANGER OF RAVENSTREAM, A ROMANCE OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR. By Newton M. Curtis, author of "The Patrol of the Mountain," "Scout of the Silver Pond" etc. Price 25 cents.

The late lamented Mr. Curtis made himself thoroughly master of almost every incident in our revolutionary annals, and here is the result of his studies in one of the most deeply interesting books we have ever read. The plot never outrages probability. The characters are nobly drawn. The style is graphic and fervid, and at the same time polished and graceful; in a word, it is romance of our country's history, penned by an eloquent writer, whose patriotic heart burned within him as he chronicled the achievements of his gallant forefathers. [Morning Star.

Also, new editions of the following books by Newton M. Curtis, Esq:

THE PATROL OF THE MOUNTAIN; Or, THE DAYS OF '76. Price 25c.

THE WORKS OF HON. W. H. SEWARD,

Edited by George E. Baker.

It has been said that there is no living American Statesman whose works embody so much that will fix and reward the attention of the student, the Statesman, and the Philanthropist, as those of Governor Seward. To the general reader—to those who wish to know who and what Governor Seward is, and especially to all who desire to obtain a complete history of the State of New-York for the last quarter of a century—these volumes will be of the highest interest.

Popular Education in all its phases; Internal Improvements, embracing the entire history of the origin, completion and proposed enlargement of the Erie Canal, and of the N. York and Erie and other Railroads; Slavery, its rights and prerogatives, the duties and obligations of the Free States in regard to it; the Public Land Question, with a history and discussion of the Anti-Rent troubles in that State; Crime and its penalties, including a review of several of the most exciting criminal cases that have ever occurred in that State; Political Economy, in its adaptation to our national condition, &c., have all been discussed with a freedom, vigor and clearness, seldom if ever equaled.

All the great questions that now agitate the public mind—the Fugitive Slave Law, the Annexation of Cuba, the Maintenance of the National Honor, the Protection of American Rights, &c., are all so treated as to shed light upon the discussions of the day, and afford information to all who wish to understand or discuss them.

Governor Seward's Correspondence, much of it having been written with no thought of publication, will be found particularly interesting and instructive, illustrating as it does the warmth with which he holds many of his peculiar opinions.

The notes on New-York, which occupy nearly two hundred pages of the second volume, form a complete history of the State from its first settlement to the commencement of his administration. His record of the proceedings to form the different Constitutions of the State, as well as the struggles and triumphs of the great Canal enterprise in the Legislature, is exceedingly valuable. These notes may be compared, not unfavorably, with those of Jefferson on Virginia.

For vigor and beauty of style, we are confident these volumes will be deemed a valuable acquisition to the best specimens of American eloquence.

A fine portrait of Governor Seward will be prefixed to the first volume; an engraving of his birth-place, in Florida, N. Y., to the second volume; and one of his present residence, Auburn, N. Y., to the third volume—engraved in the best style of art.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

From The Home Journal.

"MRS. HALE'S NEW COOKERY BOOK.—If there is a subject upon which, amongst us ladies, as a general thing, need instruction more than upon any other, it is the art of preparing dishes for the table which please the palate without injuring the digestive powers, or making egregious demands upon their husbands exchequer. The new work upon cookery, prepared by Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale, and published a few days ago by Long & Brother, aims to supply just such information. Not that it does not explain the construction of the more luxurious and expensive viands. Mrs. Hale has inquired into the cookery of all nations, and unlocks the secrets of all kitchens, from the cottager's to the monarch's, from the mechanic's to that of the merchant-prince. She gives directions how to choose, how to preserve, how to cook, how to decorate, how to serve up, and how to carve every known article of food; and gives the directions plainly and intelligently. Her work is a neat, well-printed volume, of nearly five hundred pages, illustrated by numerous engravings, and contains some thousands of recipes. To some of the articles is appended an opinion as to the wholesomeness of the viand; and we would suggest as an improvement, to a future edition, that in all of them such an opinion should be added, and perhaps some plain directions in the preface, which might enable every housekeeper to judge for herself as to the wholesomeness of every dish to the human stomach."

"Mrs. Sarah J. Hale finds time, we perceive, from her purely literary pursuits, to 'dress up' the rules, recipts and instructions which should govern all 'well regulated families
