EUGENIE; OR, THE SOLDIER'S BRIDE—By Miss Sarah M. Howe, author of "The Woodman's Rifle," "The Sybil's Prophecy," etc. Price 25 cents.

This is a delightful book, fraught with the most intensely interesting passages, the incidents forming a period in Europe's eventful history during the Great Napoleon's time, which the popular authoress has woven into a novel of more than usual powers. It is in this style of composition that Miss Howe excels. Into the work before us she seems to have thrown her whole force, and its many start ling scenes and wild adventures, together with a glowing recital of several of the most fiercely contested battles between the French and Spanish armies, rivets the attention of the reader from the initial chapter to the last.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"These most tastefully printed and bound volumes form the first instalment of a series of State Histories, which, without superseding the bulkier and more expensive works of the same character, may enter a household channels from which the others would be excluded by their cost and magnitude.

"In conciseness, clearness, skill of arrangement and graphic interest they are a most excellent earnest of those to come. They are eminently adapted both to interest and instruct, and should have a place in the family library of every American." [N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.

"The importance of a series of State Histories like those now in preparation, can scarcely be estimated. Being conducted as carefully as a science and the interest of narrative will permit, the size and price of the volumes will bring them within the reach of every family in the country, thus making them home-reading books for old and young. Each individual will, in consequence, become familiar, not only with the history of his own State, but with that of the other States; thus mutual interests will be strengthened, and old bonds cemented in a firmer reunion." THE HUMOROUS SPEAKER—being a choice collection of amusing pieces, both in prose and verse, original and selected; consisting of Dialogues, Soliloquies, Parodies, &c., designed for the use of Schools, Literary Societies, Debating Clubs, the social circle and domestic entertainment. By Oliver Oldham. 1 vol. 12 mo. $1.

"The selections are well made, and embrace extracts from the most humorous writers of England and America, with translations of the best of Yriarte's fables, and Reinnert's humorous lyrics. Thus the good things of Hood, Saxe, Bonnee Smith, Judge Haliburton, Hawthorne, Dickens, Holmes, and the Ingoldsby Legends are mingled with the best things of Colman, Garrick, Goldsmith, Wilcox, and others of the last century. As the work is intended for the use of young people, great care has evidently been taken to admit nothing bearing the likeness of an equivoque or a double entendre." [Times.

The following extract from the preface will show the design of the publishers in issuing the work:

"It yields a rich
Variety, which
May prove a kind of moral switch,
To lash the crimes that battle the law—
Ingratitude, avarice, et cetera;—for
There's many a crime, and heinous, too,
That comes not to the law's purview,
Which, still, the satirist much may do
To punish and check, in the spirit true
Of him that hates,
And sharp berates,
The sin, but not the sinning pates,
That vice and folly have rendered crazy,
Foppish or rakish, profane or lazy,
Extravagant, flippant—I know not what—
From a sober fool to a silly sot
Well, this is the aim the book would reach,
Endeavoring in humorous way to teach,
By a pertinent representative speech,
What should be avoided by all and each.
The work, in line,
Has that design
Indicated in Horace's line—
(See the title-page, and read the Latin,
A flowing hexameter, smooth as satin.)
Where a dactyl (utile) is made to meet
With a spondee, (dulce) th' appropriate feet—
One meaning the useful, the other the sweet:
Which things, says Horace, when duly they meet,
Combine to produce an author complete,
Whom every reader can gladly greet.
The book's for youth,
For schools, in sooth;
Yet it contains much humorous truth,
Well suited to teach many older folks
For many true words are spoken in jokes;
And many will take in a jocose way,
What sobeit said would drive them away;
And many will see in a ludicrous scene,
Portraits so finished, (their own, I ween,)
As to cure them of follies, and make them shun
The features they laugh at, in others, as fun.
But why all this pleading? I am no patron-seeker,
Let it speak for itself." THE HUMOROUS SPEAKER."
