We are trying to have the farmers understand that butter is higher in the winter and cheap in the summer. At present we are not producing half enough butter to meet the demand, and this shortage is sure to continue for some time. A more even supply of milk is wanted. Farmers say they cannot produce milk in winter because feed is high, but what difference does that make to the farmer who produces his own feed? As a matter of fact, his feed costs him no more in the winter than in summer, and he can get a much better price for his milk in winter.—Prof. Spillman.
