DAILY CRESCENT.

For the Crescent.

LOUISIANA.

From her old majestic forest,
By her noble rivers' tide,
From her broad savannahs' green breast
A deep voice rung far and wide.

And it cried: "Awake, thou sleeper!
From thy charmed trance arise
Rue the shadows gather deeper
On thy blue and sunny skies.

"Far, in a glorious measure,
Like some stately battle song,
Keeping Life's most precious treasure,
Has an army passed along.

"On, through the mist of Error!
On, through Oppression's night!
On, with the proud endeavor
To gain Truth's cheering light!

"Where the hand is free and brave,
Have thy sisters won their place;
Thou, alone, the very thirst,
Art a laggard in the race.

"Thou, alone, whose banner lying
On the onward march of Mind,
From its furled folds is sighing
The sad requiem of Time.

"And the Sun, which warms thy soil,
When his radiant course is run,
Can not count one act of toil
By which Fame's goal is won.

"By thy Wealth and Genius wasted;
By thy Strength which untried lies;
By thy thousand springs untasted,
We bid Thee, rise, oh, rise!"

FRENCH EXILES.—Two exiles, Messrs. Quenne and Chambonniere, recently escaped from Cayenne, where they were exiled by Louis Napoleon, for their adherence to republican principles, have arrived at Salem, Mass., in an American vessel. They are men of ability and position.

INDIAN JUSTICE.—At Weston, Me., on the 10th of December last, a young Indian by the name of John Coon, aged fifteen years, killed with an iron poker a boy named Curtis Punch, aged fifteen years. On the 15th inst., the boy Coon was shot by six men, after sentence of death being passed upon him by a council of the nation. He died like a brave—not a tear started from his eye.

Gentlemen desirous of serving their beloved country in some official capacity, some wag in the Carpet Bag hitch off thus:

"The office-holders are all in a sweat,"
Said an office-hunter, with exultation.
"True," said old Roger, "I never yet
Saw such a General Pierce-pitation."

THE MORMONS.—It is stated that a schism has already begun to work among the Mormons. A party calling itself the "New Church" has sprung up and separated from the original Mormon Society. The "New Church" has appointed seven rulers, answering to the benches of the Golden Candlestick, and the authority descends from one to the other, so that it can never cease while one is left.

LONGEVITY.—The oldest man in New England died at Nottingham, New Hampshire, on the 23d of January last. His name was Charles Willey. He was born in Nottingham on the 25th of March, 1746, and would consequently have been one hundred and seven years of age this month. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and has been a pensioner. He has been an active, robust man, and until recently has been an active laborer. He says he learned to mow when ten years old, and used his scythe until he was a hundred, and then left, as he thought ninety years was long enough for any man to follow that business. He has left a son, Mr. Jonathan Willey, between seventy and eighty years of age, who is also a pensioner for services in the war of 1812.

Mary Holton, aged 121 years, died at Elton, near Stockton-on-Tempen the 7th of January. The old lady was regarded with unusual interest in her own neighborhood, and her cottage was seldom free from visitors, to whose bounty she was, do doubt, largely indebted for the comfort that gilded her declining days. Her form was very much bent, her conversation was free and lively, and her eyes, though dimmed, retained much of their former lustre, and she was able to dispense with the assistance of spectacles to the last. She was a native of Cockfield, Durham, and she resided for some time at Long Newton, previous to her coming to her daughter's house, at Elton.

A gentleman named Hill, aged 180 years, died recently near Kells. He was one of the volunteers of 1782.

John Cryer, of Walton-du-Dale, a Greenwich out-pensioner, died on the 13th January. The deceased fought under Lord Nelson, in Her Majesty's ship Conqueror, Capt. Pedew, at Trafalgar, and received the sword from the French commander-in-chief, Admiral Villeneuve, on board the Bucentaure. He was at the taking of Genoa, and the storming of Cases; he also fought under Gen. Abercrombie in Egypt, and served under Lord Exmouth for five years. This brave man was sergeant and sergeant-major of the Royal Marines, Plymouth Division, for twenty-one years. The whole of his services during the French war were twenty-four years.

CALIFORNIA TIMES AND NEW.—In 1845 San Francisco had but 150 inhabitants. In April, 1847, there were 375 besides a few Indians. In October '47, there were 600. In October '48, 159 votes were polled, and in December '48, 347. In August '49, there were 1,519 votes cast. In January '50, the city contained 20,000 people and about 10,000 voters. In March '51 there were only six vessels in port, and on the 18th of the following December only four, and no arrival for a week. In January, February and March of 1848, there were but nine arrivals of vessels, four of which were from the neighboring ports of Monterey and San Pedro; and the last quarter of 1847, the imports amounted to $48,000 and the exports to $53,000. From the 1st of January to the 31st of October, 1852, there were 827 arrivals, with an aggregate tonage of 370,345 tons, and in last month over twenty vessels in port. From January 1 to October 31, of the year 1852, the duties received at the Custom House amounted to $1,560,842 25, and the number of passengers arriving by sea during the same period, was 59,551, while those who departed in the same manner were 19,576. The first brick building was erected in September 1848, and this was the second brick house in Upper California, there being at that date one in Monterey.

In the first two months after the discovery of gold, in December, 1847, the amount of dust brought into San Francisco was about $250,000, and during the next two months about 600,000. Now it is five millions a month. The first Protestant house of worship in California, was built by the Baptists, and was dedicated on the 4th of August, 1849. At the present time, there are eighteen churches, two of which are Catholic and the rest Protestant. January 1, 1853, there were five daily and seven weekly newspapers, twenty private banking houses, twenty-four auction houses, four bath houses, sixteen bakeries, seventeen barber shops, forty-two blacksmiths, nine book-sellers and stationers, thirty-three boot and shoe dealers, twenty-eight butchers, fifty master carpenters and builders, sixty-two clothiers, nine dealers in crockery and glass ware, one hundred and thirty commission merchants, twenty-eight dry goods dealers, thirty-four druggists, nine furniture dealers, nine fancy dry goods dealers, twenty-seven hardware dealers, ninety-three groceries, six livery stables, twenty-six musical instrument shops, twenty-two house and sign painters, eight saddle and harness makers, nine ship chandlers, twenty-four store and tin ware dealers, twenty-three tailor shops, eighteen upholsterers, forty-six dealers in watches and jewelry, about sixty physicians, and about one hundred and fifty lawyers.
