The Register and Mayor Sweeney.

The editor of the Register made a very short and feeble response yesterday to our comments of the day previous on his eulogy on Mayor Sweeney's administration of our city affairs. He claims that we came "down a peg," to quote his own language, in admitting the reduction of taxes, &c., during the last two years, and that we virtually conceded all that he had claimed for Mayor Sweeney's administration in the way of peace, good order, &c. Now no one knows better than the editor of the Register that this is an entire misrepresentation. He can not quote a single passage from our article to justify any such remark. The point we sought to make was that Mayor Sweeney could lay no claim to the merit of having either reduced our taxes or given us a better municipal government in the way of a decrease in crime, &c., and that, therefore, the Register must not undertake to practice upon the supposed gullibility of the people, as in years past, in regard to the Mayor's record. We have no special objection to the editor of the Register assuming any amount of virtuous indignation over our comments, even to the extent of saying that they were "outrageous and despicable beyond expression." And it may be, as he says, that these words have been applied to them in his hearing, by some of our "party associates." Be that as it may, he will allow us to say, on the other hand, that our comments have been but the echoes of a considerable number of his "party associates," quite as many, we judge, as he can quote from on our side in support of his assertions. We have not aimed to be personally abusive of Mr. Sweeney to the slightest degree. He is a public man and is a candidate for public office, and all his acts and qualifications, so far as they may bear upon his fitness for that office, are legitimate subjects of discussion. We have stated nothing that has not been substantiated to us as a fact, and if there were any errors in our statements it was the duty of the Register to have pointed them out. But it does not instance a single one, and therefore virtually admits them all.

The editor says that he will not dignify our comments by "offering a denial;" but will leave "the people of Wheeling" to "reply at the next Municipal election." Very well. We have no objections to that. That is a jury to which we also are willing to submit the facts as stated. If the people shall still consider that Mayor Sweeney is the best man for their Chief Executive officer, we shall certainly take our chances in the same boat, as we have heretofore, and submit to their verdict.

The National Banks.

The N. Y. Herald is agitating the necessity and expediency of abolishing the National Banks, and replacing their issues with greenbacks. The theory of the Herald is this: That the Government pays an unnecessary interest, say eighteen millions per year in gold, on the bonds held by the banks, and, in the next place, loses the benefit of a non interest bearing circulation, which it could supply in place of the National bank notes. There is nothing in the suggestion that the Government pays any more interest on its bonds on account of the National Banks, than it would were every one of those institutions blotted out. The same number of bonds would still be held by some parties, and the interest would be necessarily paid all the same as now. But there is something in the idea that we would have a better and cheaper circulation, and that the Government would be able to take up a very large amount of interest bearing debt with its non-interest bearing greenbacks. To say that the establishment of the National Banks was an original mistake is to hazard a good deal on a mere opinion. It would be difficult now to estimate the cohesive power exercised by those institutions during the war. They were the financial agents of the Government, and not only bought its bonds, and thus raised immense sums of money for the war, but induced thousands and tens of thousands of sales among the people. They are not therefore to be judged wholly by their position to-day. We must view them from first to last. As to the future, we incline to the opinion that the popular idea will be that broached by the Herald, and that the day will come when the National Banks will not be popular. A purely greenback policy would now, and from this time on, undoubtedly be the better policy for the Government. We should have no banks of issue, but banks of deposit simply, and the Government would furnish the circulating medium. There is no denying that we would thus save a large amount of interest. If ever the talked of proposition becomes a law compelling the banks to redeem their issues at New York, or in any other principal financial centres, the banks themselves will not be unwilling to see a purely greenback circulation.

SECRETARY MCCULLOCH writes to a friend: "What we need is an increase of labor. If we could have the productive industry of the country in full exercise, we could return to specie payments without any very large curtailment of United States notes. My object has been to keep the market steady, and to work back to specie payments without a financial collapse. I shall act in the future as I have in the past, with great caution, and attempt no impracticable thing."

THE New York correspondent of the Boston Journal says that the Newsboys lodging room association has received a donation of $50,000 from a Mr. Rose, of Iowa, whose brother left two million dollars to be appropriated to the benefit of poor and neglected children.

FROM WASHINGTON.

A Passage in the Senate between Senators Trumbull and Davis.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.

The only thing interesting in the Senate proceedings to-day was a slight passage between Mr. Trumbull and Garrett Davis. Mr. Trumbull had introduced a petition for a radical re-organization of the State Government of Louisiana, and in presenting it had, contrary to the custom of the Senate, made a long speech in favor of the radical theory on this subject. What took place there, is best explained in the following report of the remarks which Mr. Trumbull's speech drew from Garrett Davis, and the rejoinder of Mr. Trumbull.

A SARCASTIC SPEECH.

Mr. Davis—"I have but one word to say to the Senator from Illinois. He certainly has taken a very extraordinary occasion to deliver his speech in exposition of the merits of a petition. I presume the Honorable Senator intends it to reach the Legislature of Illinois, to influence a certain election there impending and shortly to come off, and I hope the Honorable Senator will succeed; I have read the names of the competitors of the Honorable Senator from his own party for his succession and I justly believe he is much the ablest and much the best man. Much more than any of the others, or all of them together, if they could all be made up into one mass. I therefore hope that the honorable Senator, when that election comes off, will be re-elected. I am satisfied he will bring more ability to the seat which he is to vacate on the third of March, than any one that has been named, and I am equally satisfied that although the modicum of disinterested and unselfish patriotism he will bring will not be very large, it still will be immensely larger than any other can bring. I, therefore, trust the object for which he makes this speech will be successful, and that he will be re-elected." [Laughter on the floor and in the galleries.]

AN ANGRY REPLY.

Mr. Trumbull, who had listened nervously to the above, jumped up when Mr. Davis was seated, and replied angrily:

Mr. President—I regret that the Senator from Kentucky cannot rise above personal considerations in the discussion of questions in this body. I thank him for his personal kindness to me, and hope to be upon terms of personal friendship with him while we are members occupying seats here. But I never myself have been guilty of indulging in a reflection upon the motives of Senators in their discharge of public duty here, and I am sorry that the Senator from Kentucky is cast in that mould that he supposes when a brother Senator takes a particular course here, it is done in reference to his future political prospects. I think, sir, if I know myself, I have been governed in my action in this body by a sense of public duty, and that there is nothing in my course to warrant the Senator from Kentucky in casting any such imputations upon me as making speeches for the purpose of securing a re-election to the Senate. Sir, he may be cast in a mould that would do that, I am not, and if my public course here, sir, is not such as to meet the approbation of my constituents, I will take the consequence of it. I have not shaped it, sir, in reference to securing the personal approbation of my constituents, further than the discharge of my public duty may give it, and the imputation of the Senator from Kentucky is wholly uncalled for."

AN EXPLANATION.

Mr. Trumbull took his seat in a very fidgety way. Mr. Davis got up and said: "I would just say a word in explanation to the Senator from Illinois, with the indulgence of the Senate. The Honorable Senator best knows, and he is the best judge, whether if he be animated by any desire to secure his re-election, he is animated by a dishonorable motive. I leave the decision of the question with him. I have nothing more to say."

THE GLASS INTEREST.

Languishing Condition of the Glass Trade---Proposed Suspension of Manufacturers---Protection Needed.

To the Editor of the Pittsburgh Commercial:

In your Monday's issue, you spoke of the "tariff on woolen interests," and the anxiety felt in regard to the report of the House Committee on that subject. It is not generally known, but it is a fact, that so great is the interest of the glass manufacturers in regard to their future operations, that on Thursday last eighteen flint and lime houses (including three from Wheeling) were represented in convention at the office of James R. Lyon & Co., of this city. In the discussion of the tariff question, it was stated that lamp chimneys were imported into our market three months ago, as low as thirty-five cents per dozen, that being ten cents per dozen less than the price of chimneys of the same quality, in this city at that time.

A committee of three were also appointed (to report at an adjourned meeting) to get the views of those not present, in regard to a general suspension of operations for three months. Here is one of the strong arms of the industrial interests of the West languishing, and perhaps to be for a time paralyzed, for want of proper protection. Thirty furnaces (about three hundred pots), furnishing employment to about eighteen hundred men, women and children, paying into the United States Treasury the sum of three hundred thousand dollars per annum for internal revenue alone, and this only one branch of the glass business, makes the subject, when properly considered, one of vast importance. Will Congress allow such an interest to be neglected? Can the United States afford to lose so much revenue? Can the American Congress refuse to the great loyal West the encouragement she so richly merits? We trust not. R.

Birmingham, December 18, 1866.

IT SEEMS from the testimony of Mr. Garrett, the President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, that the Fast Freight business on that road is done by the Company, and that the Company runs its trains so rapidly that this business is done with more despatch than by the freight lines on other roads; and the fact is demonstrated that a railroad can do its own traffic as expeditiously as it does the traffic of others, to whom it makes concessions on its line. Mr. Garrett's testimony is especially valuable as pointing out the evil results which ordinarily follow, when private companies undertake an enterprise which belongs legitimately to the railroads, and his observations are worthy of the attention of all railroad stockholders and managers.

We add to this testimony that of Mr. Gaither, an express superintendent, who sees peril to the express interests in the action of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. There is a certain business which may, with propriety, be given up to express companies, but the vast mass of the freighting traffic, now so largely in the hands of private organizations, belongs to the railroads, and should be done by them, to the immediate increase of their profits and the advancement of the interest of stockholders.

GENERAL GEORGE H. THOMAS commenced his speech in reply to the address of Governor Brownlow presenting him, on behalf of the Tennessee Legislature, with a gold medal, by uttering the following appropriate and patriotic sentiment:

Some twenty years ago I received my diploma at the Military Academy, and soon after a commission in the army. On receiving that commission I took the oath to sustain the Constitution of the United States and Government, and to obey all the officers of the Government placed over me. I have faithfully endeavored to keep that oath, as a solemn pledge on my part to return to the Government some little service for the great benefit I had received in obtaining my education at the Academy.

DR. HOLMES' NEW NOVEL, The Guardian Angel, opens in the January Atlantic with a brilliant display of his delicate fancy, his subtle philosophy, his rare wit, and his impressive suggestiveness. Portions of the first chapters are just delicious. This probably contains the keynote to the story:—

"It is by no means certain that our individual personality is the single inhabitant of these our corporeal frames. Nay, there is recorded an experience of one of the living persons mentioned in this narrative—to be given in full in its proper place—which, so far as it is received in evidence, tends to show that some, at least, who have long been dead, may enjoy a kind of secondary and imperfect, yet self-conscious life, in these bodily tenements which we are in the habit of considering exclusively our own. There are many circumstances, familiar to common observers, which favor this belief to a certion extext. Thus, at one moment we detect the look, at another the tone of voice, at another some characteristic movement of this or that ancestor, in our relations or others. There are times when our friends do not act like themselves, but apparently in obedience to some other law than that of their own proper nature. We all do things both awake and asleep which surprise us. Perhaps we have co-tenants in this house we live in. No less than eight distinct personalities are said to have co-existed in a single female mentioned by an ancient physician of unimpeachable authority. In this light we may, perhaps, see the meaning of a sentence, from a work which will be repeatedly referred to in this narrative, viz: 'This body in which we journey across the isthmus between the two oceans is not a private carriage, but an omnibus.'"

The Beethoven Society.

Editors Intelligencer:

Some person, whose zeal outruns his discretion, and whose desire for fame outruns both, essayed a professed defense of the Beethoven Society in the INTELLIGENCER of yesterday, over the signature of "That's All." Consultation among almost all the members of the society show that the communication referred to was not written by a member nor with the consent of the society, and that it disclaims and disapproves the words and spirit of yesterday's article. The Beethoven Society invites fair and just criticism, and has no desire to be misrepresented by any officious outsider. If "Reserved Seat" shall follow up his criticism in such way that any of the Beethoven Society desire to reply, some of them feel able to do so; at any rate it will be time enough for "That's All" when they signify their inability.

The matter is one of very little importance, and attention is called to it only that the public may not think the Beethoven Society entertains any such notions as were yesterday published ostensibly in its behalf. "Save us from our friends."

The next time "That's All" feels impelled to write a "piece," he will favor the Beethoven Society, which really entertains some respect for itself, by taking some other subject, say English Grammar. This time "That's All" was that much too much. We hope it may be "all" of that kind.

B. THOVEN.

AN English jury has decided that when a man who is smoking in a railroad car, refuses to remove his cigar at the request of his fellow passengers, they have the right to knock it out of his mouth; and the judge thought that the blowing of tobacco smoke in the face of a fellow passenger might be considered an insult.

A ST. LOUIS girl went into a dentist's office on Saturday, had a set of teeth fitted, and then said she would call the following week and pay for them. This did not suit the dentist, and the fair and frail one ran off, hotly pursued by the bareheaded dentist, until both ran into the hands of the police.

MARRIED.

On Tuesday, December 18th, 1866, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rt. Rev. Bishop R. V. Whelan, Major EDWARD W. STEPHENS, Jr., of New Castle, Pa., and ANNIE T. COX, of this city.

DR. P. MEREDITH, Dentist, Office No. 132 West Sixth Street, states as follows:

CINCINNATI, October 1, 1863.

MESSRS. J. N. HARRIS & CO.—Gents.—About one year ago I took a cold which settled on my lungs. A violent cough was the consequence, which increased with severity. I expectorated large quantities of phlegm and matter. During the last winter I became so much reduced that I was confined to my bed. The disease was attended with cold chills and night-sweats. A diarrhea set in. My friends thought I was in the last stages of Consumption, and could not possibly get well. I was recommended to try

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM.

The formula was shown to me, which induced me to give it a trial, and I will only add that my cough is entirely cured, and I am now able to attend to my business as usual. Yours respectfully,

P. MEREDITH.
