The Intelligencer.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Oh! martyr to thy country's cause,
Upholder of her outraged laws,
A sorrowing nation weeps and draws
Around thy bier.

Not even in thy hour of might,
When in that holiest cause—the right—
Thy armies put their foes to flight,
Wert thou so dear.

Nor when thy pen, with power unspoken,
Proclaimed the bondmen's shackles broken.
And gave thy signature, in token,
A deathless fame,

Wert thou so loved, as prized as now,
When death's pale chaplet wreathes thy brow
And but remains the patriot's vow,
Who breathes thy name.

Oh! mothers, teach each infant's tongue
The name of him whose race is run,
Once Freedom's—now Fame's—favorite son,
Though in the tomb.

Oh! banner of the azure field,
Of silvered stars and shining shield,
Craped be thy folds, that never yield,
To show our gloom.

Why it was the People Loved Abraham Lincoln.

The following extract is from a letter published several days ago—before the assassination—by the correspondent of the Boston Journal, who accompanied Mr. Lincoln at the time of his entry into Richmond, from the boat on which he had come up from our lines below.—[EDS. INTEL.]

There was no carriage near, so the President, leading his son, walked three-quarters of a mile up to Gen. Weitzel's headquarters—Jeff Davis' mansion. What a spectacle it was! Such a hurly-burly—such a wild indescribable ecstatic joy I never witnessed. A colored man acted as guide. Six sailors, wearing their round blue caps and short jackets and bagging pants, with navy carbines, was the advance guard. Then came the President and Admiral Porter, flanked by the officers that accompany him and the correspondent of the Journal, then six more sailors with carbines—twenty of us all told—amid a surging mass of men, women and children, black, white and yellow, running, shouting, dancing, swinging their caps, bonnets and handkerchiefs. The soldiers saw him and swelled the crowd, cheering in wild enthusiasm. All could see him, he was so tall—so conspicuous. One colored woman standing in a doorway, as the President passed along the sidewalk, shouted; 'Thank you, dear Jesus for this! thank you, Jesus!' Another standing by her side was clapping her hands and shouting: 'Bless de Lord!'

A colored woman snatched her bonnet from her head, whirled it in the air, screaming with all her might, "God bless you, Massa Linkum.' A few white women looking out from the houses waved their handkerchiefs. One lady in a large and elegant building looked awhile, and then turned away her head as if it was a disgusting sight.

President Lincoln walked in silence, acknowledging the salutes of officers and soldiers, and of the citizens, black and white. It was the man of the people among the people. It was the great deliverer, meeting the delivered. Yesterday morning the majority of the thousands who crowded the streets and hindered our advance were slaves. Now they were free, and beheld him who had given them their liberty.

No wonder that President Lincoln, who has a child's heart, felt his soul stirred; that the tears almost came to his eyes as he heard the thanksgivings to God and Jesus, and the blessings uttered for him from thankful hearts. They were true, earnest and heartfelt expressions of gratitude to God. There are thousands of men in Richmond to-night who would lay down their lives for President Lincoln—their great deliverer—their best friend on earth. He came among them unheralded, without pomp or parade. He walked through the streets as if he were only a private citizen, and not the head of a mighty nation. He came not as a conqueror—not with bitterness in his heart, but with kindness. He came as a friend, to alleviate sorrow and suffering—to rebuild what has been destroyed.

MRS. LINCOLN.

The sympathies of the American people will be sincerely accorded to Mrs. Lincoln in this hour of heavy bereavement. The assassin of her husband, we are told, leaned over her shoulder when he fired the fatal shot. The dismay and horror of a wife and mother under such appalling circumstances are inconceivable. Every loyal man and woman in the land deeply condoles with this estimable lady in her sore affliction.—If it will mitigate her anguish to know that the whole country sorrows with her, and that millions of households are this day draped in the habiliments of mourning, she has that assurance. Surely it will be consolatory to feel that among so many patriot hearts there is but one sentiment in common, the same inconsolable grief and the same righteous indignation.

LIQUID

CATARRH REMEDY

CURE WARRANTED

IF DIRECTIONS ARE FOLLOWED.

Call for Circular describing all symptoms.

SYMPTOMS:

The Symptoms of Catarrh as they generally appear are at first very slight. Persons find they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition, the nose may be dry, or a slight discharge, thin and acrid, afterwards becoming thick and adhesive. As the disease becomes chronic, the discharges are increased in quantity and changed in quality; they are now thick and heavy, and are hawked or coughed off. The secretions are often give, causing a bad breath; the voice is thick and nasal; the eyes are weak; the sense of the smell is lessened or destroyed; deafness frequently takes place. Another common and important symptom of Catarrh is, that the person is obliged to clear his throat in the morning of a thick or slimy mucus, which has fallen down from the head during the night. When this takes place the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should lose no time in arresting it.

The above are but few of the many Catarrh Symptoms.

A single Bottle will last a month—to be used three times a day.
