PAST AND TO COME.

[illegible] Amidst summer weather [illegible] in Spring in New Orleans) marks [illegible] and amusements in [illegible] and tranquil, [illegible] and lightly engaged [illegible] No one will part [illegible] Our Great West has [illegible] our bosom with [illegible] Thousands of [illegible] of this year [illegible] which have flocked [illegible] into gold, and a [illegible] pleasure, pre[illegible] for future enjoyment. [illegible] have been thronged with [illegible] audiences. These signs of pros[illegible] more pleasing because they serve [illegible] all the doubts and apprehen[illegible] and poor, formed the single of [illegible] and commercial journals [illegible] would have given stronger [illegible] of the enterprise of New Or[illegible] and social advancement, [illegible] the very few months [illegible] more startling indication of [illegible] and rapid growth, than is afforded [illegible] patronage extended to those es[illegible] which have ministered to our love [illegible] of luxury and amusement. Our [illegible] from the opening of the season, [illegible] Blessed passenger. Though it [illegible] of all death and candor [illegible] have been on a [illegible] and cultivation of our [illegible] have extended to [illegible] all the efforts on their part, [illegible] rich harvests, [illegible] have been so heavily laden [illegible] a bed might [illegible] the whole season. So the well-deserving [illegible] have waxed the lovers of fine music by [illegible] which frequently would not [illegible] the desirous of enjoying its de[illegible] Our theatres [illegible] variety, and, [illegible] engaged [illegible] No one will part [illegible] Our theatres [illegible] Our [illegible] Our [illegible] Our