"I Can't Afford it."

Many persons, when talking of taking a paper, say—and truthfully as it would appear at first thought—"The times are hard, and we can't afford it." Let us see about this. What makes one man more successful than another, as a general rule, is, that he thinks better; he makes his mind help his hands. He plans and "calculates" better. Timothy Bunker, Esq., speaking of a successful farmer, said, "He manures his land with brains."

If a man reads about his own business, he is thus getting the benefit of other men's thinking, other men's experiences, other men's failures and success. Although he may not follow a single method described by another, yet the very act of thinking about it starts new trains of thought in his own mind; and though he does not see it or notice it, yet every thought he gets from another is developing his own thinking, and making him a better planner and calculator, and he will in the end get more and better results from his own work. It pays to read and think about one's business, whatever it be—whether farming or anything else.

DID IT PAY?—A TRUE STORY.

Thirty-four years ago, two brothers settled on adjoining farms, with equal advantage as to soil, markets, capital, etc. One of them subscribed for the American Agriculturist, and now and then bought a book or two about his own business—the whole costing an average of about $6 a year. His boys read and thought about their work, became interested in and respected it, and were happy in their toil, because they had something to think about. They grew up intelligent, and settled as good, prosperous farmers, respected and influential. . . . The other brother (partially influenced by an economical wife) "couldn't afford papers and books" (he could afford 6 cents a day, or $20 a year, for tobacco, beer, etc.) His boys worked sullenly by day, and "skylarked" at night; they despised and hated their work, which for them was only exercising brute force, with little mind applied. When old enough to escape parental restraint, they quit the farm, one for this, and another for that, and none of them have amounted to anything. He is himself a sullen, dissipated man. Six dollars a year, or even two dollars a year would have made a wonderful difference—would have changed their whole course of life. Would it have paid? Reader, make a note of this true story, and choose the better way.

* * * But more about the "can't afford it." A very little saving, as a stick of candy once in two days, or the poorest three-cent cigar omitted once a week, will meet the expense of a good paper. A very small plot of ground cultivated in odd hours will yield corn or potatoes enough to furnish a dollar or two for a paper. One good or extra hill in each row of corn or potatoes, in a modern sized field, will do it. Note the following:

LITTLE THINGS—INTERESTING EXAMPLES OF SAVING OR PRODUCING THEM.

Life is mainly made up of trifles. A pin-hole will in time sink a large ship. A small saving per day or week will speedily amount to a large sum. An extra production of a small thing, as an extra egg per day or week, a good hill of corn in each row, a bushel of wheat, or corn, or potatoes, extra per acre, will in the course of years make one comfortably rich, or what may be better, will buy many convenient or useful things as one goes along, and such extra production is easily secured by trifling thought, care or labor.

A correspondent tells how, by keeping up with the times and acting upon the information contained in his paper, from time to time, he sold 123 bushels of potatoes for 10 cents a bushel more than his neighbor, who "couldn't afford to take a paper," and miscalculated the market. His paper paid him $12 30 in this one case.

Another tells how he got five cents a bushel more for 215 bushels of oats, or $10 75, for the same reason given above.

☞ * * I was sowing two similar ten-acre fields of wheat. One was done, and while reading my agricultural paper at night, I saw an item of ten lines about treating the seed. I tried it on the second field, at a cost of only twenty-five cents, and got from this field at least five bushels more per acre of sound, good wheat, or fifty bushels more, which sold at $1 12½ a bushel—a net gain of $62 25.

The fact is, a man with the smallest farm or garden-plot can not in these days afford to be without the hints and suggestions that even the poorest journal treating about his business will give him, during a year. Such papers set him to thinking. If he has judgment enough to cultivate a farm at all, he will pick out the good things and make use of them, and reject the bad, if the paper is not wholly a reliable one.—[American Agriculturist.

Professor Proctor on Astronomy.

Our sun, is one among hundreds of millions, each of which is probably, like it, the center of a scheme of circling worlds. Each sun is rushing along through space, with its train of worlds each bearing perhaps, like our earth, its living freight, or more probably each, at some time or other of its existence, becoming habitable for a longer or shorter period. Thus the suns may be compared to engines, each drawing along its well freighted train. Accident among these celestial engines seems fortunately to be rare. A few among the suns appears suddenly (that is in the course of a few hundred years, which in sidereal chronometry amounts to a mere instant) to have lost a large part of their energy, as though the supply of fuel had somewhat run short. Mishaps of that kind have not attracted much attention, though manifestly it would be a serious matter if our own sun were suddenly to lose three-fourths of his heat, as has happened with the middle star of the plow, or ninety-nine hundredths, as has happened with the once blazing, but now scarcely visible, orb called α, in the keel of the star ship Argo. But when we hear of an accident of the contrary kind—a sun suddenly blazing out with more than a hundred times its usual splendor—a celestial engine whose energies have been overwrought, so that a sudden explosion has taken place, and the fires meant to work steadily for the train, have blazed forth to its destruction—we are impressed with the thought that this may possibly happened with our own sun. The circumstances are very curious, and though they do not show clearly whether we are or are not exposed to the same kind of danger which has overtaken the worlds circling around those remote suns, they are sufficiently suggestive. "Now, a point to which I would call special attention, is that all the elements of the catastrophe, if one may so speak, which has befallen the remote sun in the Swan exists in our own sun. At times of marked disturbances parts of our sun's surface show the lines of hydrogen bright instead of dark, which means that the flames of hydrogen over those parts of the sun are hotter than the glowing surface of the sun there. We have all heard, again, how Faculani and Secchi, in Italy, attributed some exceptionally hot weather we had a few years ago to outbursts of glowing magnesium. And, lastly, our sun is well supplied with that element, what ever it is, which gives the bright line of its corona during eclipses; for we now know that the whole of the streaked and radiated corona occupying a region twenty times greater than the globe of the sun (which itself exceeds our earth one million two hundred and fifty thousand times in volume) belongs to the sun. Again, though the sun has shone steadily for thousands of years, yet, so far as can be judged, the suns which, like this one in the Swan, have burst out suddenly, blossoming into flames of hydrogen, within which the star's heat core glows with many hundred times its former heat, have also been for ages shining steadily amid the star depths. We know that the one which blazed out ten years ago in the Northern Crown was one of Argelander's list, a star of the tenth magnitude, and that, after glowing with eight hundred times its former brightness for a few days, it has resumed that feebler luster. We have every reason which analogy can furnish for believing that the new star, which was not in Argelander's list, simply escaped record by him on account of its faintness. It is now fast losing its suddenly acquired lustre, and is already invisible to the naked eyes. It appears, therefore, that there is nothing in the long-continued steadfastness of our sun as a source of light to assure us that he, too, may not blaze forth with many hundred times his usual lustre (the conflagration being originated, perchance, by some comet unfortunately traveling too directly towards him). Though he would probably cool down again to his present condition in the course of a few weeks, no terrestrial observers would be alive at any rate to note the fact, though the whole series of events might afford subject of interesting speculation to the inhabitants of worlds circling around Sirius or Arcturus.

Sulphur for Scarlet Fever.

Dr. Henry Pigeon writes the London Lancet as follows:

The marvelous success which has attended my treatment of scarlet fever, induces me to let my medical brethren know of my plan, so they may be able to apply the same remedy without delay. All the cases in which I have used it were very well marked, and the epidermis on the arms in each case came away like the skin of a snake. The following was the exact treatment followed in each case: Thoroughly anoint the patient twice daily with sulphur ointment; give from five to ten grains of sulphur in a little jam three times a day. Sufficient sulphur was burned twice a daily, on coals on a shovel, to fill the room with the fumes, and, of course, was thoroughly inhaled by the patient. Under this mode of treatment each case improved immediately, and none were over eight days in making a complete recovery, and I firmly believe in each case it was prevented from spreading by the treatment adopted. One case was in a large school. Having had a large experience in scarlet fever last year and this, I feel some confidence in my own judgment, and I am of the opinion that the very mildest cases I ever saw do not half so well as bad cases do by sulphur treatment; and as far as I can judge, sulphur is as near a specific for scarlet fever as possible.

Life Insurance Frauds.

[Philadelphia Ledger.

Of all rascals, those who squander or fraudulently make away with the trust funds designed for the maintenance of the widow and orphan after the husband and father is no more, are the most rascally, and should be dealt with to the utmost severity of the law. Within this class fall the numerous life insurance swindlers who delude policy-holders with false pretenses, deceive them in every possible manner, falsify their accounts, swear to investments of the trust moneys that have no existence, and then finally sell out their bankrupt concerns to others in little or no better condition than themselves. These words describe the proceedings of two or three bankrupt companies whose affairs have been very prominently before the public for three months past. It will be a reproach to the age and a scandal upon justice, if the men who have been guilty of the deceptions and perjurers developed in the course of the investigations into the affairs of these companies shall be permitted to most punishment that lies within the reach of the law. In the olden time, in Great Britain, there used to be a form of condemnation "without benefit of clergy;" these men, if condemned without benefit of "mercy" from the jury or "clemency" from the pardoning power.

Besides the losses and sufferings they entail upon their immediate victims, they impair confidence in the system of life insurance, which is a most beneficient institution, and bringing reproach on good names of the great majority of companies which are well and honorable conducted, and are the means of accomplishing a vast amount of good.

Do you take The Sunny South?

If not, send for it immediately. It is the universal favorite, and all Southerners are proud of it. Let a large club be raised without delay in this community. It is the only illustrated literary weekly in the South, and the press and people everywhere unite in pronouncing it the equal in every respect of any similar publication in America. The best literary talent of the whole country, North and South is writing for it, and it has something each week for all classes of readers. Its stories are superior in literary merit, and equal in thrilling interest, to those of any other paper, and its essays upon all subjects are from the best minds of the age.

In addition to thrilling new stories, a series of brilliant articles will soon begin on the CAMPAIGNS AND BATTLES OF THE ARMY OF TENNESSEE, by COLONEL B. W. FROBEL, a distinguished military engineer of that army in all its trying times. These papers will explain all the movements of Generals Johnston Hood and Sherman. Don't miss any of the numbers. They will read like a fascinating romance.

New and exciting stories are begining every week or two.

State and local agents are being appointed everywhere, but let each community form a club at once and remain for the paper. Having passed successfully through two of the hardest years we shall ever see, it now challenges the admiration and unlimited support of the people. The price is $3 a year, but clubs of four and upwards get it for $2 50. Address JNO H. SEALS, Atlanta, Ga.

☞ We club it with the HARTFORD HERALD, and for $4.00 you can secure your home paper and our great Southern literary journal, both of which everybody in this community should sustain.

GIVEN AWAY

To all persons who have Chills and fail to be cured It is not often during these hard times that we ever hear of anything being given away; but in the present case we have an article that will bear the closest scrutiny and severest test in every sense of the word, and feel determined to place it before the public in such a manner that there cannot be a "doubting Thomas."

To day all who may be afflicted with any form of Ague, or Chills and Fever, we make the proposition

To All Persons

To cure you with one bottle of Day's Ague Tonic.

It never produces partial deafness, dimness of vision, buzzing or roaring in the head, or any of those unpleasant symptoms that follow the use of Quinine, it does not contain arsenic, strychnine or any other poison; it acts freely upon the liver and bowels without the use of nauseating pills; it can be given to those whose stomach reject Quinine, and the cures are prompt, effectual and permanent.

Procure from any Druggist or Merchant, one bottle of Day's Ague Tonic, use it as directed, and if it fails, return the empty bottle, and the money will be refunded to all

Who Have Chills.

This is surely a fair proposition, yet strange to say, none have been returned us. Druggists and merchants say it gives more complete satisfaction, and sell more readily than any other chill remedy they ever sold.

Sold by Druggists and Merchants generally, at one Dollar per bottle.
