American Widows' Relief Association of the City New-York—Designed principally to relieve famine-stricken families, rescued from comfort, and, in many cases, from affluence to a state of terrible destitution.

During the last month, we have furnished food and clothing to many families whose sufferings are almost inconceivable. These families are destitute through want of work. That cause still continues. Many of them have lived all through the winter by pawning their clothes. They can live so no longer—they have nothing more to pawn, and they cry to us for food. They cannot live without further aid, and their native American pride revolts against begging.

To save these women and fatherless children from such a fate we must have money. We also want Clothing, Dry Goods, Shoes, Stockings, Bedding, Provisions. Such donations may be sent to the Office of the Secretary, No 114 Jrevne-st. We appeal with confidence once more to a generous public. We know the object is one of the most worthy of all charities.

REPUBLICATION of MISS AUSTEN'S NOVELS.
PRIDE AND PREJUDICE.
By Miss Austen.
Author of "Sense and Sensibility," "Emma," "Northanger Abbey," "Persuasion," and "Mansfield Park."
In one volume, 12mo., 326 pages; cloth, 75c.; paper, 50c.
Published this Day:
MISS AUSTEN'S CELEBRATED NOVELS have been out of print for some years in this country, and the undersigned propose to republish them, complete in uniform style.
PRIDE AND PREJUDICE is now just issued, and it will be followed in due time by her other works.
Miss Austen is emphatically the novelist of home. She was the founder of the domestic novel, and although many of her followers have achieved brilliant successes, yet to this day Miss Austen remains undisputed mistress of the path which she struck out for herself. The truth, spirit, ease, and refined humor of her style, have never been equaled. Her descriptions are so perfect, her characters so genial and truthful, and her incidents so unexceptionable, that we rise from the perusal bettered by the task, and more lenient toward our common humanity.

HILL'S PRACTICAL VIOLIN SCHOOL.—The very best Violin Instruction Book ever published, and designed expressly for the American Student. Selected, composed and arranged by U. C. HILL, President of the N. Y. Philharmonic Society, pupil of Spohr, &c., &c.

The principal and very great difference in this work over all others is, that it may be correctly learned and played in a very short time, thus gaining a thorough knowledge of the instrument without requiring so much toil in mastering difficult passages.

It may not be out of place here to mention, for the information of those who are unacquainted with the fact, that the author and compiler of this work has made music, and the Violin particularly, his most devoted study from early childhood; and that he is the first American who visited Europe to place himself, for a number of years, under the instruction and advice of Spohr and others of the very best masters.

The publishers have received the most flattering testimonials in favor of Mr. Hill's excellent book, and they take pleasure in submitting the following extracts from letters, received from Signor Rapetti, late Conductor of the Italian Opera, New-York, and Geo. F. Bristow, Conductor Harmonic Society:

From Signor Rapetti, late Conductor of Italian Opera:
FIRTH, POND & Co.—Sirs: From the inspection which I have been able to make of your "Violin School," selected and composed by my friend, U. C. Hill, I deem it a timely contribution in aid of the students of that instrument. It is progressive and practical, the progression is not too rapid, but judicious.
Yourssvery cordially, MICHAEL RAPETTI.
No. 41 West 26th-st., New-York, Jan., 1855.

From Geo. F. Bristow, Conductor Philharmonic Society, &c.:
MESSRS. FIRTH, POND & Co.—Gentlemen: I have received a copy of "The Practical Violin School," selected, arranged, and composed by Mr U. C Hill. It gives me great pleasure to be able to say that I consider it one of the best, as well as one of the most progressive works that has ever appeared. I think it just the work that has been so long required, especially for beginners. So highly do I think of it that, for the future, I shall use it in preference to any other.—I have the honor to be yours truly, GEO. F. BRISTOW.
