"THOU SHALL NOT KILL."

In pursuance of announcemet, Rev. Dr. John Lee Allison, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in this city, last night delivered an address on the commandment "Thou shalt not kill."

The doctor, among other things, said the words should be rendered "Thou shalt do no murder," and that the revised version so translated the commandment. He showed the difference between murder and killing in carnage, which it is unnecessary to reproduce, as it must be apparent to every one that there is a material difference.

A few days ago, at a meeting of clergymen in Philadelphia, one doctor of divinity read a paper arraigning the churches for inefficiency in not saving the world from this war, and the following paragraph is attributed to him:

The war grows out of a wrong state of mind of the people, and this raises the fundamental question: Could not the churches have created a state of mind which would have made war impossible? There is a failure somewhere, and it is useless to try to blink the facts. The churches have failed to create a Christian state of mind in the peoples under their tutelage. They have failed to give the nations a strong and wise leadership. Surely 1900 years is long enough for the churches to have understood some of the things of Christ, and to have gone some distance toward the Kingdom of God.

The paragraph that we quote looks very much as if this teacher of religion and morals were unable to distinguish between the highwaymen, the traveler whom he assaulted, and the policeman who overpowered him. They were all fighting together, and fighting is unchristian, and the fight was due to the fact that their pastors had not taught them properly.

Our ministers generally—the essayist from whom we have quoted seems to be an exception—are patriotic enough to shout loudly for the United States. But we earnestly hope that any minister of the gospel who feels moved to talk about the war will clearly fix in his mind the relative moral positions of the highwayman the traveler and the policeman.

"KILLED AND WOUNDED."

In glancing over a file of the Alexandria Gazette of 1864 we read the following, doubtless written by the elder Snowden, who edited the paper at that time. He was a pathetic writer. It evidently reflected his anxieties, he having a son who, while not carrying a gun, was on many battlefields during the four years' conflict.

"Wounded and Killed."—It takes but little space in the columns of the daily paper, but oh! what long household stories and biographies are every one of these strange names we read over and forget! Killed and wounded! Some eye reads the same, to whom it is as dear as life, and some heart is struck or broken by the blow made by the name among the list.

The younger Snowden to whom we refer was surgeon of the Alexandria Regiment (the Seventeenth Virginia), and we have heard him tell of hospital tents being struck by shells during a battle. This was, however, not done intentionally, as we prefer to believe, but in the excitement of battle. However, it was occasionally done, and at times when the surgeon and his assistants were rendering attention to the wounded.

Conditions described over half a century ago are being gradually reproduced in Alexandria. Many of our noble youths are now on the firing lines in far-away France. They have anxious relatives and friends in their native homes who scan with fear and trembling lists of casualties.

The present fearful war has placed crape upon many doors, though, so far, many Alexandrians have offered up their lives, few have fallen in the defense of their country. May the God of peace bring back safe and sound the dear ones we have "over there."

ROUNDING UP SLACKERS

Officer Bell yesterday arrested two negro youths, believed to be within the draft age, on the charge of vagrancy. Neither being able to produce a registration card, they were turned over to the United States authorities.

The authorities throughout the state are becoming active in the work of ferreting out slackers.

The work of rounding up all draft dodgers in Richomnd is steadily progressing under the direction of the Richmond division of the United States Department of Justice. One negro, charged with failure to register, and seven possible delinquents were apprehended Saturday morning and given a preliminary hearing before Commissioner Flegenheimer. All are being held for the Federal court.

The United States Department of Justice, through the State, urge all patriotic citizens to report suspected instances of failure to register, and continues to warn all registrants of the state to carry their registration cards, lest they are subjected to a hearing before a United States Commissioner and a possible term of imprisonment of one year in the Federal prison.

WAR IN THE HOLY LAND.

Dispatches today tell us of the capture of Nazareth by the allies. Recently Jerusalem was wrested from the Turks who had misruled the "City of the Great King" for centuries. Eighteen thousand prisoners were taken in Nazareth and one hundred and twenty guns.

The Saviour of Mankind was reared in Nazareth. It must have been a village in His day, as it is mentioned only in the New Testament, and seems to have been unknown until some of the church fathers in the early days of the Christian era began to write about it.

It has often been suggested that one of the outcomes of the present war may be the revival of the Kingdom of Judea. Zionists have for the last half century been anticipating this to them great desideratum.

We are living in a day of wonderful and startling transitions. While a large percentage of the followers of the Man of Nazareth suggest that the restoration of the Kingdom of Judea will not be to accomplished literally but in a spiritual sense, equally as many more believe in a literal restoration of the Jews into their own land.

Jerusalem is in possession of the friends of the Sons of Abraham, as is also the city in which Jesus Christ spent the thirty years of the time he tabernacled with men.

AMERICAN INFLUENCE

It is possible that some news from the United States may reach a few of the German people through the medium of the press of Denmark and Holland. But, as the Baltimore Sun says, the German papers, of course, falsify and the German people are kept in ignorance as far as possible of what this country is doing.

An article in a Copenhagen newspaper which has been cabled to the New York Times shows that at least in Denmark they have information from this country. The attention of the world, says this Danish paper, is directed toward Washington, not toward London or Paris. It is Wilson and not the Prime Minister of England or France who formulates the decisive answer to Austria's sinister proposal. Germany jeered at America, deeming it impossible for her to transport an army across the sea even if she had an army to transport. Our declaration of war was termed "platonic." In a country where war and military training is a business and every male citizen is a man of war from his youth up, the amateur was regarded with contempt. Europe underestimated America, says this newspaper, and before all, Germany, when instead of America's friendship and neutrality it preferred unrestricted submarine warfare which America made ineffective and American transports, carrying 300,000 soldiers in a single month, are crossing the sea in safety.

The most suggestive intimation in this remarkable article is that the achievement of America already has dealt the death blow to militarism. If America can enlist, equip and train a vast and efficient army in a year and ferry it across the Atlantic, what is the use of putting a heavy burden of taxation upon the people to maintain a great military machine through years of peace. According to the Dane, a modern war being so greatly a matter of machinery, financing and equipment, in all these things the United States is pre-eminent, and this explains to a degree their marvelous achievement in getting into the war. "The American sporting spirit," says the article, "has celebrated its greatest triumph, the war is not yet decided and it is idle to predict its outcome; but however it may end, it has brought one result—America's new position of strength, which can now hardly be disputed."
