Barber-Shop Poetry.

AIR—"Ben. Bolt."

On, don't you remember Lew Ransom, friend Joe,
Lew Ransom, the Barber up town,
Who smiles with delight, when you give him a call,
And does up his shaving so brown.

In the next barber shop on Main-street, friend Joe,
Beneath the [illegible] house so fine,
He has fitted up [illegible] with soaps of every scent,
And the striped pole is his sign.

Upon his soft cushioned chair, old Joe,
That spreads wide its arms for us all,
Together we've sat in the noon-day time,
And snoozed while he shaved us so well.

Many Barbers have tried in vain, old Joe,
But their efforts can never compare;
For the customers flock around the shop to see
How tastefully he clips off the hair.

There's a change in the times I know, friend Joe,
They have chang'd from the old to the new,
And I feel in the depths of my pocket the truth
That prices down town of have chang'd too.

Four years have passed, or more, old Joe,
Since Lew Ransom's name was first hail'd,
And his shop is deemed a blessing in truth,
For to please he has never yet failed.
