THE AMERICAN GENTLEMAN'S GUIDE TO POLITENESS AND FASHION.
BY HARRY LUNETTES.
One neat 12mo. Price $1 25.
Says the Christian Freeman: "We do not hesitate to pronounce this beautiful volume the best work of the kind ever issued. This author is no disciple of Chesterfield, but, if he is an example of his theory, he is a true gentleman. The book is not only of great value to every young man in particular, but it is exceedingly interesting. Advice is given on dress, manner—in these the author takes Washington as authority—health, letter-writing, accomplishments, habit, mental and moral education, choice of companions and friends, selection of a pursuit in life, courtship, marriage, housekeeping, pecuniary matters, &c. Each point is illustrated with sketches and anecdotes from life. We heartily commend this work to the attention of every young man."
Says the Lowell Vox Populi: "We have read this book through, and lay it down with the conviction that we have not met with a more really useful and agreeable volume for a long time. It is just the book which 'Young America' needs, and we hope he will study it thoroughly, and profit by its teachings. While the dignified and chivalric politeness of the 'old school' era seems almost to have died out among us, there is yet, we believe, sufficient left to 'leaven the whole lump' of modern society, when thoroughly distributed. The book before us is written in most attractive style, racy, brilliant, and abounding with illustrative anecdotes, delightfully combining amusement with instruction, and teaching the most valuable lessons."
