D. APPLETON Co., Nos. 346 and 348 BROADWAY, will publish on SATURDAY,
THE LIFE OF
CHARLOTTE BRONTE,
Author of "Jane Eyre," "Shirley," "Vilette," &c.
By Mrs. Gaskell,
Author of "Mary Barton," "Ruth," "North and South."
With a Portrait of Miss Bronte, a View of Haworth Church and Parsonage, and Fac Simile of Hand Writing of Miss Bronte.
In Two Volumes, 12mo., cloth. $1 75.

From The London Athenæum.

"The story of a woman's life unfolded in this book is calculated to make the old feel young and the young old. Persons who have been conversant with society and manners as they existed in the remote corners of England within the century, will feel themselves strangely recalled to the narrow homes, the grim prejudices, the few pleasures and privileges belonging to a period of heavy taxation, costly literature, and limited intercourse, by the picture of a provincial parsonage and its inmates here set before them. Some of those, on the other hand, who are bursting into life, and brimming with creative power, may feel pained (as it were by some cold prophecy) while they follow the record of a career of self-denial and struggle, sustained to the last with courage, principle and genius, but without hope. Nevertheless, a true tale of what may be achieved in spite of disabilities, be the facts ever so cheerless, let the pilgrim's lot have been cast on ever so rugged a road, let his cup have been ever so full of the waters of bitterness, can hardly be followed to its close without some strength being gained for the reader. By all, this book will be read with interest. As a work of art, we not recollect a life of a woman by a woman so well executed. The materials were not large, and the difficulties of selection were obvious. There may have been reasons why the publication of this biography should not have been postponed, but these reasons subject surviving relatives of the deceased to close description and free comment, since to write the life of a woman and to omit a clear development of the circumstances which formed her character and influenced her hopes is impossible.

"Protracted life and success, and increased experience with what is best in society (not what is most convenient in observance), might have ripened, and mellowed, and smoothed the creations of this singular novelist without destroying their charm of force and individuality. But conjecture stops at the grave-side. At the time when "the silver lining of the cloud" began to show itself, when domestic cherishing and prosperity seemed to await her after so many hard, dark, cruel years, the end came. All this is gently and sadly told by Mrs. Gaskell, with whom the task has been a labor of love (a little, also, of defense)—and who, we repeat, has produced one of the best biographies of a woman by a woman which we can recall to mind."

From The N. Y. Tribune.

"Strong in its intense individuality, bold and self-sustaining in the absence of wide and tender sympathies, and of a deeply tragic cast from purely impersonal causes, the life of Charlotte Bronte, as portrayed in these volumes by her congenial biographer, has not a little of the sombre fascination which throws such a potent spell around the pages of "Jane Eyre" and "Vilette." Mrs Gaskell, as will be seen on the perusal of the Memoirs, had before her a task of uncommon delicacy. The vein of bitterness, the pictures of hard and bare reality, the want of hopeful glimpses of the future, which mark the writings of Currer Bell, had their foundation in her own experience, were the combined products of her character and her history. Involving the misconduct of others, as they often do, it was no easy matter to decide how far justice to the dead was compatible with mercy to the living. On this point Mrs. Gaskell has acquitted herself with fidelity to the truth, with commendable frankness of statement where publicity was allowable, but with a modest reserve in regard to incidents which belong essentially to the domain of private life. Her narrative is wholly unaffected, perhaps slightly tinctured with the severity that naturally grows out of the subject, but often relieved by the picturesque details of the local scenery and customs in the quaint region which will henceforth be associated with the name of Charlotte Bronte. * * * * Let her memory be left where it is committed with tender earnestness by her admirable biographer, not with the critical, unsympathetic public, who are inclined to judge harshly because they have only seen superficially and not thought deeply; but with that larger and more solemn public, who know how to look with tender humility at faults and errors; how to admire generously extraordinary genius, and how to reverence with warm, full hearts all noble virtue.'"

GRACIE AMBER.—
By Mrs. Mary A. Denison.
One volume 12mo., $1 25. Author of "Home Pictures," "What Not," "Carrie Hamilton," &c.
Pronounced by the best judges—and many of them—one of the most thrilling and engaging books that has appeared for many years. Its moral is that, "though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished." The story is of love, crime, struggles with poverty, temptation, suspicion and conspiracies, under which innocence, gentleness and beauty are, for a season, oppressed and crushed; but in the progress of the tale they come forth hightened by the fiery trial, and joy crowns the days of those who suffer the most. Grace Amber is one of the most beautiful creations of genius; "to know her is to love her;" Mother Mott is a rare old character whose quaintness enlivens the story; Jupe is a curious fragment of humanity, less than man and yet little more than brute; Paul Halburton is an elegant villain, with money and power, and the veiled lady a mysterious being, thwarting his devilish designs, and a score of other subordinate characters, are handled with consummate skill, deepening and involving the plot that grows darker and more exciting, till the great religious truth of Providence—to reward the good and punish the evil—is brought out with admirable effect. "Several of these characters are drawn with remarkable boldness of outline, and the faith which some of them are made to cherish in the overruling Providence of God, is fully justified by the conclusion to which the reader is conducted. We commend the story as one in whose composition, delicacy and power are happily blended, and whose moral tone is everywhere elevated and pure; and we cannot forbear to congratulate the sprightly and gifted author, on the success with which she has wrought into instructive romance the possibilities of Boston life." [New-York Examiner.

"A powerful, thrilling story, told with great skill and effect illustrating a great truth, and enforcing it so as to make a profound impression. The heroine is a creature whom we love, Jupe is an original, unique and extraordinary character, and the several parties introduced are managed with admirable tact. The book is decidedly one of the best works of fiction that our lady writers have given to us in many years, and we shall be greatly surprised if it is not popular with the reading community." [New-York Observer.

THE ELVES.
LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms, and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest; but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

6,000 ACRES of LAND, with BLAST FURNACE and FLOURING MILL, FIVE MILES from the CITY of BALTIMORE.
The undersigned, agent for the Curtis Creek Mining, Furnace and Manufacturing Company, offers this tract for sale in a single body or small farms. It is situated on Curtis Creek, five miles from Baltimore by land and nine miles by water.
The LAND is admirably adapted to MARKET GARDENING, and is similar to the neighboring farms of Messrs. Cromwell, Linthicum, Stewart and others, from which large supplies of fruit and vegetables are annually sent to Philadelphia and New-York, and large profits realized therefrom.
Parts of the tract are well wooded with PINE and CHESTNUT TIMBER, which can be shipped from the Furnace wharf in vessels drawing ten feet water.
The WATER-POWER is unbuilding, the fall 22 feet, capable of running with ease six pairs of Burrs and the Blast Furnace.
STORE, STABLING, KILNS, &c., are erected near the Furnace. Ore can be delivered from neighboring ore banks by boats at the Furnace door. And Anthracite coal can be landed there at Baltimore prices or less.
The quantity of Wood in the vicinity, however, renders the location a most desirable one for a charcoal furnace.
The Furnace, with water-power and 300 acres of land attached, will, if required, be sold or leased on favorable terms.
To parties purchasing the whole tract, the charter of the Company could be transferred. It is one of the most liberal charters ever granted by the State.
This large property, in the vicinity of so large a city, promises to become exceedingly valuable in the course of a very few years, and presents an excellent opportunity for speculation to capitalists who may be able to bring it properly into market.
It is offered now at a low price and on satisfactory terms.
