We have selected for the Fourth and Fifth volumes of our Library of Standard Tales, Cousin William and Gervase Skinner. Among the modern sketches of domestic and fashionable English life, no one has been more successful than Theodore Hook, and the general voice of the critics gives the preference, among his numerous productions, to these very spirited and entertaining novels. They exhibit all the varieties of his style, and were written at a period of life when his experience was mature, and before his powers were impaired. They are from the third series of Sayings and Doings, or Sketches from Life, where they were printed with the motto from Shakespeare on the title page, "Full of wise saws and modern instances."
