EATING ICE-CREAM RAW.

BY JONAS JONES.

On a warm and sultry evening during the summer of '48, as Dr. B—— and myself were seated in a fashionable saloon of our town, indulging in the cool luxuries which the proprietors of the establishment know so well how to dispense, and chatting the while upon such subjects as fancy and caprice suggested, a tall, poor-looking individual of about twenty-three, from his appearance, and after looking around for sometime in bewilderment and perplexity, seated himself at a table close by the door at which we were sitting. The young man was evidently a stranger, and from the country; and the illuminated sign, with "Ice Confectionaries," etc., etc., blazoned on the door, had evidently taken him in. Knowing the Doctor to have a great propensity for practical joking, I turned to see what effect this new arrival would have upon him; at the glance at his restless, twinkling eye, I perceived at once that there would be sport; the tiger was already in imagination gloating over his prey.

After sitting sometime as if uncertain how to proceed, the young man plucked up sufficient courage to address us, and inquire whether he could "get some ice cream and a couple of confectionaries;" stating, at the same time, that he had "never been at the canawl afore, and didn't know how people acted at sich places." He was informed by the Doctor that if he would ring the small bell which stood on the table, his wishes would be gratified. The green 'un did as he was directed, and in due time was served with the ice cream and "confectionaries." After eyeing for a few moments the article before him, he took the spoon from the glass, took a small quantity of the cream, and put it on the tip of his tongue, and then looked about the room with an air of great satisfaction and delight. Soon, however, another idea seemed to strike him; he rammed the spoon deep into the glass, took it out heaping full, and in a moment its contents had disappeared.

At this instant I felt a twitch at my side; the Doctor was on his feet and clutched my arm convulsively, and with one hand pointing towards the victim, almost screamed:

"My God, that man is eating his ice cream raw."

Down went the ice-cream, spoon, confectionaries and table upon the floor; out leaped the victim at least ten feet towards the middle of the room gasping for breath, eyes protruding from their sockets, and countenance exhibiting marks of the greatest terror and helplessness. In a moment the doctor was by his side, felt his pulse, unbuttoned his coat, waistcoat and shirt collar as if to admit fresh air, then gently pushed him into a chair, and commenced fanning him with the skirt of his coat. It was then that the victim's tongue first became loosed, and with imploring look, he half whispered, half screeched, "Oh, kin I live?" Upon this, the doctor looked mysterious, felt his pulse again, examined his tongue, and then in a solemn tone replied:

"It may be, young man, that by implicitly following my directions, you can yet escape the consequences of your rashness and folly. I would advise you to"—

"Any thing, I'll do any thing you tell me, so as I kin get over this spell and find my way home again."

"Well, then, sir, take off your coat." The young man did so. "Tie a handkerchief about you;" he was obeyed. "And now, sir, go to the door, run three times around this square with all the might that is in you; and then come back to me, and I will tell you what further to do."

The young man vanished, and we resumed our seats. In a few minutes, however, he returned, puffing and blowing, and apparently in better spirits.

"Now," said the doctor, "do you put on your coat, button it up close to your chin, go to your lodging-place, and turn into bed immediately; and let me advise you, young man, that hereafter, before you undertake to eat ice-cream, see that it is properly prepared; and let me particularly charge you," and here he assumed a very serious air, "never do you attempt to eat it raw!"

The young man stammered forth his thanks for the advice, and then left, we following soon after.

FREAK OF FORTUNE.—A Paris paper relates that in that city, a prize of 10,000 was drawn in the Loterie Picarde, by a waiter in a café. Two gentlemen who had bought a quantity of tickets, sat down to a green table to divide them equally. There was an odd ticket over, after the division was effected, and they gave it as a gratuity to the waiter. As a matter of course, the forty or fifty tickets that the gentlemen had kept for their own use, were every one of them blanks.

A man in Wheeling, Va., rendered himself a cripple for life, by taking a cold bath while sweating. Paralysis immediately shrivelled his left side from shoulder to foot—a deadness creeping over it which no medical aid can probably remove.

HOTELS—RESTAURANTS.

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.—The undersigned, having leased for a term of years those newly discovered and highly valuable Mineral Springs, respectfully informs the public that he has opened a large and commodious Hotel for the reception of persons desirous of visiting the place during the ensuing winter. Extensive additions have been made to the Hotel, and no effort has been spared to make it in the highest degree convenient and comfortable. Attached to the Hotel will be found Billiard Rooms, and other amusements usually found at watering places, while the fishing and sea bathing cannot be surpassed by any Southern country. The analysis of the water of these Springs, as made by a distinguished chemist, proves that it contains mineral qualities of the highest order. The table of fare and accommodations will be found equal to any other, and many persons suffering from chronic diseases have been restored to health by the use of this water. The Steamboat Cleole will ply daily between New Orleans and Ocean Springs during the summer, starting from the Lake end of the Pontchartrain Railroad. L. JENNINGS.

GREEN OAKS HOTEL, Biloxi, Miss.—This favorite and popular Summer Retreat, so generally known throughout the Southern country, under the management of Mrs. ELIZA SMITH PRADAT and herself, JOHN B. PRADAT being now associated in the management, has been the resort of fashion for the last of June for the reception of visitors. The "GREEN OAKS" is too well known to need an extended notice. For many years the patronage of the most fashionable has been steadily increasing. The many natural advantages, commanding the finest water prospect on the Lakes, and receiving the pure salt water as it flows from the Gulf, have led to the extensive patronage of visitors from New Orleans, Mobile, and the surrounding country. During the Winter the premises have undergone extensive improvements and additions. The BILLIARD ROOMS are throughly arranged and fitted up, and SAIL BOATS will be at all times at the service of visitors, free of charge. CARRIAGES and HORSES may be procured at any moment. In addition, the celebrated BRASS BAND of New Orleans engaged, and will play to the general delight twice every week. Visitors wishing to stop at the GREEN OAKS, are requested to tell the Captains of the Steamers who will land them at the wharf of the Hotel.

BELL CHENEY SPRINGS.—The undersigned respectfully inform the public that they have purchased the Bell Cheney Springs, in the county of Ouachita, and have commenced the erection of extensive improvements for the accommodation of Visitors. The Springs are situated in the lower portion of St. Landry, thirty-seven miles north west of Opelousas, about the same distance south of Alexandria, and ten miles north of Bayou Chicot. The water possesses highly medicinal qualities, and has proved effectual in many aggravated diseases which was beyond the reach of ordinary remedies. The Bath is supplied by Spring Water, and much approximating to the celebrated Bath of Bedford Springs, affording the sport to the hunter; and the Lake, seven miles in length, with depth of from twenty to twenty-five feet, attached three miles and a half from the Springs, abounds in Trout and other fine fish. A pack of Hounds for hunting, and Boats for fishing, will be furnished to the visitors. The best Wines and Liquors which the New Orleans market can afford will be kept constantly on hand. Couches can always be procured at Opelousas and Washington to transport any number of passengers to the Springs. Good Mules will be furnished at Washington, Opelousas, Grand Coteau, Hunting Horses and Vehicles to transport ladies to the Lake will be provided for the accommodation of visiting parties, free of charge. Fishing Tackle may be purchased at the Springs. Visitors received from 1st May to 1st November.

LAKE HOUSE, NEW SHELL ROAD. The Subscriber respectfully notifies the public that he has fitted up the Lake House, formerly known as the Spanish Fort, in a manner not surpassing any other place of the kind in the vicinity, and has secured for their expected benefit the exclusive privilege of the Lake under water lands in the Southern District, and assures his friends, with all confidence, that from this time out the accommodations will be equal to any of FISH, FLESH, WILD and TAME FOWL, SELECT WINES, etc., will be held in readiness for sudden call, many days in advance of city time, and rather than that some should be disappointed, will quality or charges. [ap9 1f] G. CULLUM.

TRADE HOTEL, R. S. MORSE, Proprietor. This establishment, so favorably known to the public, has been thoroughly repaired and newly furnished, and will be found THE MORNING, Monday, November 1st, 1854, to be in all respects the equal of any other house in the city. Its location, in the immediate vicinity of the Steamboat Landings, Steamship Offices, and Business Houses, renders it the most desirable one for the accommodation of Merchants and Planters. Its Table will be supplied with the best the markets afford, and its Bar with the choicest Wines and Liquors. Its Rooms will be found well ventilated, and its Beds free from the annoyance of Bugs and Vermin. Its Stables are large and commodious, and its Hostler always on hand. The Omnibus will be found at the Steamboat Landings, and will convey passengers to the Hotel free of charge. R. S. MORSE, Proprietor.
