"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold set in pictures of silver."

THE RAPID AND IMMENSE SALE OF
LIFE-THOUGHTS, BY
HENRY WARD BEECHER,
is conclusive proof of its power to arrest the attention and to move the hearts of men. In a time when the language has been so thoroughly used up by advertisers—when every trumpery story is heralded in the newspapers in terms that would require modification if applied even to the acknowledged masters of English—it is difficult to set forth the real merits of a work containing
THE BEST THOUGHTS OF A GREAT MIND, ON THE GRANDEST OF THEMES,
in such a way that the public will get a correct impression.
HENRY WARD BEECHER,
however, is not a "light under a bushel." All over the country his voice has been heard; and wherever he has gone, his influence remains. The masculine vigor of his intellect, the electric energy with which it acts upon other minds, his broad and catholic views, his wonderful powers of illustration, and the exuberant flowers of poetry—as natural to his style as carved work to Gothic architecture—all these are characteristics which belong to
HARDLY ANY OTHER LIVING PREACHER.
Of some of these felicitous sentences The N. Y. Evangelist says:
"They are characterized by an epigrammatic force, a beauty of illustration and rare felicity of expression, that render them eminently worthy of preservation. They show the preacher that these once an orator and a poet. And when it is considered that these happy thoughts were commonly unpremeditated, occurring only at the moment, the spontaneous outpourings of his discourse, they show the variety and richness of the speaker's mind, perhaps more than could any studied and elaborate performance."
The testimony of The Tribune (rarely lavish of praise) is equally strong:
"His extemporaneous effusions will bear repetition without any essential loss. They generally rest on a substantial basis of thought, and always reproduce some striking fancy. But they are more remarkable for their happy application of obvious ideas to every-day human experience, and the forcible, dramatic compositions which clothe them with a vivid reality. They do not evaporate on being put in print. * * One cannot but be struck on looking over this volume with the remarkable freedom of the preacher from mannerisms, or the recurrence of favorite forms of thought and expression. His phraseology is indeed imbued with the strong individuality of his nature, but it has none of the earmarks which writers like Carlyle and Emerson, and other claimants of originality, attach to the offspring of their brains, till they weary even their admirers by their repetition."
The Publishers believe that LIFE THOUGHTS is not a work of merely temporary interest, but will become AN ACKNOWLEDGED CLASSIC.
The scholar and the lover of poetry will read and re-read it for its beautiful imagery; the philanthropist will find continued stimulus to exertion in its active sympathy with the welfare of mankind, and the Christian, now and hereafter, will catch a higher inspiration from its glowing piety.
TWENTIETH THOUSAND NOW READY.
