OGDEN CITY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 19. 1887.

General Notes.

We have been enjoying a fine spring rain that moistened the bushes and buds and gently laved the lawns.

During Lent there is at the Church of Good Shepherd a daily evening prayer on week days at 3:30 o'clock, except on Fridays when there will be evening prayer and lecture by the Rev. Samuel Unsworth at 7:30 p. m.

Dr. O. B. Adams, one of the leading members of the medical fraternity of this city, intends leaving us for the East in a few days. He will leave a void behind him.

Our sidewalks still need a good deal of fixing.

In a few days we shall be compelled to bid adieu to our old friend Rollin P. Saxe, the great importer of thoroughbred stock. He will be greatly missed in social circles as will his amiable wife.

The rivers are rising rapidly and will swell still more with the heavy snows melting in the mountains.

All telegraph operators are not as lucky as some, For instance, the other night one of the Western Union Morse manipulators drove out to the Hot Springs of Dr. Slater with his inamorata. They had a bath (in different apartments, of course) took supper together, smoked cigaretts from Payson's, and were about to return to Ogden, when, lo and behold! their buggy had disappeared, as Cicero puts it: Abiit, evasit, erupit. Now for the telephone to the livery stable for another conveyance. An anxious hour or two and finally there came relief. On the way back they met the old nag quietly jogging along between the two railway tracks. But the double back fee is what troubles the Knight of the Key, although he had extra time with his girl.

Henry Smith, the lower Fifth street barber, is made sport of occasionally by some unscrupulous wags in his neighborhood. But he buries his grief in THE DEMOCRAT and gets consolation therefrom.

Whooping-cough, scarlatina, diphtheria and other similar diseases of more or less dreadful effect are best warded off by complete cleanliness, both of your person and your premises. Let the sanitary committee make a rigorous search of the town.

If Dame Rumor, having gone out of her way for once, speaks truly, it would pay during the coming summer to have an office for a justice of the peace at the Hot Springs, so as to accommodate loving couples who have been reading or dreaming about the veil that will be lifted for them in the Gretna Green of conjugal bliss. That popular resort is planted with yew trees. This is no pun, either, neither does this suggestion need any browning, as it is done up all in good faith.

"It is only right to state, although somewhat tardy, the two friends of Major and Mrs. Silva, to whom is due all credit for the admirable arrangements of the funeral are none other than Colonel Hudson and T. A. Knauss." The foregoing in yesterday's Tribune jottings must be considered in miserable taste. From our long acquaintance with the gentlemen named, we know them to be modest and unassuming, and that they neither desire nor seek such notoriety. While the fact stated is undoubtedly true, we are inclined to think that both Colonel Hudson and Mr. Knauss are averse to newspaper credit for the faithful performance of a sad duty.
