proved more durable than any other fibre. It is also used extensively for ladies' lustrous dress fabrics and much is worked up in connection with silk goods. The world's annual supply is about 20,000,000 pounds, the bulk of this being fairly evenly divided between Turkey and South Africa. The United States uses about 2,000,000 pounds per annum, but as yet produces only about 500,000, so that there is ample inducement for raising more of the product here, especially in view of the fact that under the new tariff a duty of twelve cents per pound will be imposed on the imported article. The skins of the Angora goats are very beautiful when properly dressed and are gaining much favor as ornaments and for rugs, baby carriage and sleigh robes, and for making into capes for ladies and children.

The Angora goat will thrive wherever sheep do well and in many places which are too rough and brushy for the latter to be kept profitably. They will live on grass, but are exceedingly fond of underbrush, which they will clear out and kill when closely confined on a limited area of it. They are not subject to disease; their meat is excellent, and for combining intelligence, attractiveness and profit they are probably unrivaled among our domestic animals.

John S. Denniston, Colby, Kitsap County, inquires for address of a breeder of Shropshires. We refer him to the advertisement of L. F. Mascher.

The Yakima County Sheepbreeders' Association is figuring on importing a carload of purebred Delaine and Rambouillet bucks from the East.
