ANNOUNCEMENT.
GREAT FAIR
AT THE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
DECEMBER, 1859.
The Academy of Music will, during the first two weeks of the month of December next, exhibit an entirely new and novel attraction. The Opera will, for that time, give place to a SPLENDID LADIES' FAIR, to be held by the ladies of the principal Catholic Churches of New-York, for the benefit of the charities connected with the "Institution of Mercy" in Houston-st., in this city. Many noble-hearted and charitable ladies of other denominations have also associated with them in their work of charity—for all, both Protestant and Catholic, have witnessed the self-sacrificing zeal with which the Sisters of Mercy devote all the energies of their lives to their sacred duties—in visiting, aiding, and comforting the poor, the friendless, the destitute, and the sick, of every denomination and creed, in their own wretched dwellings, and in the Prisons. The immediate inducement to this great undertaking on the part of the ladies engaged in it has been the fact that not only are the means heretofore contributed for the charities dependent on the Institution of Mercy wholly inadequate, but the buildings and grounds of the institution are so incumbered with debt that there is great danger of their being lost to the cause of charity, unless redeemed by the active zeal of the friends of the poor.
The ladies have determined to make this Fair the most splendid ever held in New-York, and have, at a heavy expense, engaged the Academy of Music for that purpose. It will have many new and attractive features, several articles having already been imported by the ladies expressly for it. A full concert band has been engaged for each evening; and the ladies feel confident that the charitable public, who have so often visited the Academy for pleasure and amusement, will, on this occasion, visit it to sustain them in their arduous undertaking, and enable them to raise the means to relieve the destitute poor and suffering, and soothe in their last moments the anguish of the dying.
