A Learned Blacksmith on Women.—The New Orleans Bee continues to be a sharp controversy with [illegible] Courier's favorite about the way the [illegible] in this city on the 3d. The [illegible] of Democracy [illegible] Democracy to manage. [illegible] the "authorities." [illegible] Plaquemine Sentinel and Donaldsonville Chronicle, we learn that the Democrats in Ascension, St. James, St. Mary, Iberville and Point Coupee will very settle down [illegible] Baton Rouge Advocate, 10th.

We don't see how the election could have been [illegible] than it was. A more quiet and peaceable election was never held in this or any other city of its size on the American continent. Everybody voted that wanted to vote, and those who did not vote have nobody to blame but themselves. Ingress to and egress from the polls was safe, easy and convenient to every suffragan in the metropolis, although the undue multiplication of the polling stations caused needless walking, and many mistakes and misapprehensions.

If the entire "army" of the Superintendent of Elections had been out, "armed and equipped according to law," there would have been no occasion for their services. They would have found no disturbers of the peace to arrest—no riots to quell—nor anything official to do. There was no use for them, whatever; and the money that have been or may be paid for their unrequited services, is just so much dead loss to the tax-payers.

But is there no "Democracy to manage" in the city? That is a question for the Advocate and Courier to settle. We have nothing to do with it. If we were to venture an opinion, however, we should say that there is a very unmanageable Democracy in New Orleans, and that it is "getting no better fast" every day!

Talk on 'Change.

The gatherings at the usual places were large. The chief talk was the expected news from Europe. Some thought that, as unfavorable news travels fast, that news of a different import should travel slow, and seemed to think that the Arabia's advices will be of a cheering import. We hope they may, though we confess, in stretching our hopes to the far best tension, believe that cotton will have more than demonstrated last quotations. Last quotations, however, will cover and justify the highest prices now paid in this market, and leave a good margin. So, dealers in exchange need not be chary about touching bills with shipping documents. If, at 95, there is no room for profit, it is about time to look for some other mode of trading and dealing in this branch of finance.

The good slow steamer Granada, from New York and Havana, was reported about noon yesterday as being in the river, bringing up something over six hundred thousand dollars in gold. This, though not so much as expected, nevertheless was something to talk about.

There was a manifest improvement in trade on the levee and landings yesterday. Cotton comes in freely, and the planters generally are losing the mark promptly. Of course there are some exceptions; but we hope there will be but very few who will disregard their obligations to their factors and agents. We do not mean that the good name of a Southern planter should be tarnished by withholding his produce, as many farmers and producers in the North and West who are holding until prices conform to their views.

A circular forwarded from New York by the last steamer for Liverpool, has the following remarks regarding cotton:

NEW YORK, NOV. 3, 1857.

The receipts are 100,000 bales less than to the corresponding dates of last year. Some of this must be attributed to the late rains, which have had a good deal to the indisposition of planters to send cotton to market for sale at the recent heavy decline, and while monetary affairs are in such a deranged condition. Shippers will persist in the course until later accounts from Europe foreshadow the probable price at which cotton will be needed there. A systematic holding back by planters will not check British imports, the exports are larger this week than was expected, particularly to Great Britain, for, notwithstanding the difficulties in the way of negotiating, we have cleared 33,000 bales for Great-Britain, 6,000 bales to France, and 7,000 bales to other foreign ports.

We have accounts from Augusta, Georgia, of the occurrence of a frost in that vicinity, and to other southern parts of the State. It is too soon, however, to know the effect of this on the crop of that locality. From other cotton-growing districts we have to-day accounts, on the contrary, the reports are that the crop, under the favorable weather for the past three weeks, gives better promises. It is still too early to form an opinion as to the probable yield of the crop. Though the South has pretty generally adopted 2,500,000 bales as the probable crop.

The talk is general that every planter who owes any thing in this city, is bound to send his cotton to market at once, and relieve his merchant. Good prices result just as much for the factor's benefit as for the planter's. Those planters who do not owe any thing can keep their cotton as long as they desire.

SHAWLS AT GREAT BARGAINS.—A splendid and very large assortment of shawls, and other comfortable articles of ladies' wear, is offering by Messrs. P. & E. Reilly & Co., No. 126 Chartres street. This is attraction enough; but a greater attraction is the remarkably low rate at which they are being sold. Read the advertisement, ladies.

TOBY'S EXPRESS.—The Messrs. Toby give notice that they will not hereafter receive, at the ferry landing, freight intended for their Express by the Opelousas Railroad. Shippers and others should note this fact. See card.

HOOP POLES.—Messrs. T. G. Mackey & Morris, No. 21 Gemaverne street, have received 20,000 hoop poles. Coopers will heed the fact. See advertisement.

OYSTERS BY WHOLESALE.—Mr. Joseph P. Moreira, at No. 18 and 20 Fulton street and No. 10 Front street, is prepared to supply oysters in any quantity to families, hotels and steamboats; not only fresh, but spiced and pickled oysters. See his advertisement.

REMOVAL.—Messrs. C. W. Phillips & Co. have removed to No. 45 Union street.

NEGROES FOR SALE.—Mr. J. M. Wilson, No. 18 Esplanade street, has on hand a fine lot of Maryland and Virginia negroes, suitable for plantation and family service. See advertisement.

BOOKS AND STATIONERY.—Mr. J. B. Wasson, No. 69 Common street, has just received and is now opening a large and splendid assortment of blank books, school books, cash books and other articles valuable to merchants and business men generally. See his advertisement, in another column.

THE FORTY DOLLAR SEWING MACHINES.—Mr. M. S. Hedrick, at No. 7 Camp street, is the agent for the sale of sewing machines of the most simple, serviceable and generally desirable kind for plantation and family use. Their price is only forty dollars, and all Mr. Hedrick asks is for those interested in such articles to call at his agency and examine the machines. They are easy to learn and not liable to get out of order. We refer to Mr. H.'s card, in another column.

HOUSE STOLEN.—See advertisement to this effect in another column.

SALE OF BOOTS, SHOES AND BROGANS.—We call the attention of the trade to the sale of one hundred cases of boots, shoes and brogans, to take place this day, at 10 o'clock, at Bluche & Lexamont's auction rooms, No. 77 Chartres street. Terms, cash.

☞ W. C. Jewett sells at 10 o'clock A. M., at No. 73 Camp street, books, stationery, diamonds and jewelry; also fancy goods and general merchandise.

CREDIT SALE OF WINTER CLOTHING.—We call the attention of the trade to the sale of an extensive assortment of winter clothing, to take place this day, at 10 o'clock A. M., at Bluche & Lexamont's auction rooms, No. 77 Chartres street, (up stairs.) Terms—Over $100, sixty days' credit for approved endorsed paper.

FOR MEMPHIS AND CAIRO.—The Memphis packet line steamer Belfast, Capt. W. Wray, connecting through to St. Louis and Louisville by first class packets from Memphis, and by Illinois Central Railroad from Cairo, leaves at 5 P. M. this day. J. H. Freight, agent—office under St. Charles Hotel.

MATERIAL PROGRESS IN SPAIN.

It is the universally received opinion, not only in this country but elsewhere, that Spain, once so glorious, wealthy and powerful, is, and has been for years, in a state of continual retrogression, and that it would be impossible to stop her downward career. Still she stood conspicuously the pauper among the nations.

It gratifies us to know that these impressions and these opinions of the world are founded in error—that Spain is improving instead of declining, increasing in wealth and population and advancing in commerce and manufactures, instead of retrograding in either of these elements of national greatness and substantial prosperity. That the good work of regeneration has been auspiciously begun, we shall proceed to show; and we trust it will continue until that bountifully endowed land shall reach its ancient pitch of affluence, power and grandeur, not by war or conquest, but by the peaceful, yet no less glorious means afforded by the pursuits of agriculture, commerce, manufactures and the general development of the vast material riches of the country.

A late Madrid journal contains a table and some statistical statements in relation to the Spanish census of May last. The New York Evening Post has some abstracts from the document, which throw much light upon a hitherto dark subject, and are, hence, quite interesting. If the figures in the census of May last, and the figures and facts drawn from the census of 1849 are correct, the present population of Spain approximates seventeen millions of souls—an increase of about three millions since 1849. In the line of population these statements show an advance equally extraordinary and encouraging. On account of this increase the Government has in view a re-apportionment of the capitals and districts, and a table has been prepared setting forth the actual present population of the capital of each province of the kingdom. This table exposes an activity quite surprising for a nation that was supposed to be progressing backward, if at all. In forty-nine capitals of provinces the increase of population has been more than half a million in eight years, and in some of them the progress made would not compare very unfavorably with that of American towns. For instance: In 1849 the population of Lugo, capital of a province with the same name, was seven thousand; now it is twenty-one thousand.

The principal increase, however, has been in the seaport and manufacturing cities. Thus Madrid, the capital of the kingdom, has increased but twenty-one thousand, while Valencia, a manufacturing mart, has risen from eighty-five to one hundred and twenty-one thousand. Renowned Saragossa has nearly doubled its population, while its manufacturing and commercial industry has proportionately increased. All the capitals, according to the statistics taken as above mentioned, have greatly enlarged, and several of the smaller ones have doubled their numbers.

But Spain has improved materially in other respects. Her progress has not been confined to commerce, manufactures and population. She has commenced the building of a system of railways and constructed several. After the termination of the civil wars the government, after examining into the matter, determined upon the experiment of constructing railroads. Against this project the general opposition of the superstitious inhabitants was arrayed. The mountainous nature of the country also interposed formidable obstacles; and in 1848, under very unpromising circumstances, the first railroad in Spain was opened from Mataro to Barcelona, a distance of fifteen miles. The shortness of this road rendered it insufficient in length and importance to nullify the prejudices of the ignorant or to demonstrate the vast utility of the general system. The government then, in order to dissipate prejudice on the one hand, and to show the great worth of railroads on the other, very wisely concluded to open and construct other lines. The fruits of this far-seeing policy were in the very highest degree satisfactory. Public enthusiasm was awakened by the success of the enterprise; various lines were projected, some of considerable magnitude, and that from Granallers to Barcelona was completed with great promptitude.

It is no wonder a spirit of enterprise and activity was infused among all classes of the people by the construction of these railroads. Water does not more naturally seek its own level than does the successful completion of one practicable enterprise stimulate and bring into being useful enterprises of a kindred character. A Spanish journalist, alluding to the building of the first railroad in his native land, uses the following language:

This was the triumph of light over darkness—of a wise and liberal policy over narrow bigotry and superstition; and it has inaugurated a spirit of peaceful rivalship and industry, destined to conduct our country to a position of equality among the most prosperous nations.

True, most true, if the work so encouragingly commenced is carried forward to completion, as it should be. The same writer tells us, that it has had a wonderfully beneficial effect upon commerce, agriculture, manufactures and every other branch of industry; and, as a specimen, states that the town of Grao de Valencia, which heretofore has had little or no commerce, has been completely changed—that the harbor has been repaired, and that during the first six months of the present year there were one thousand and thirty-four arrivals in port and about as many clearances.

These figures and statistics, meager though they be, show conclusively that Spain has accomplished and is accomplishing more for herself by peaceful means, than she has ever been able to accomplish by conquest or the sword; and that if the policy so happily inaugurated is steadfastly pursued, commercial, agricultural and manufacturing prosperity will follow, just as surely as the seasons fulfill their accustomed round, and without these, in this age, no nation can be either powerful, wealthy or progressive.

MARRIED:

On the 11th inst., by the Rev. Mr. Guthrie, Mr. L. J. HARRIS and Miss REBECCA MEYERS, both of this city.

☞ How often do we hear the inquiry made, what can I get to cure this violent cramp I am mightily subject to? I well know the cause to be my too frequent indulgence in eating the vegetables and fruits of the season, besides taking a dozen or more glasses of ice-water during the day—consequently, must pay the penalty. Our advice to such would be, always to keep a bottle of Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters in the house, as it will afford instant relief to any person having Cramps, Spasms, Cholera Morbus, etc., which are generally the result of over indulgence in vegetable diet. In fact, when interest is consulted, no family can afford to be without these bitters. They can be had of any of our druggists for one dollar per bottle, containing a full quart, which will last the season. Sold by all druggists and dealers generally.

☞ When worn out with an aching cough; when prostrated with night sweats; when the well defined hectic flush and debilitating Diarrhea has marked the victim—sure harbinger of an early grave—without one moment's delay resort to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, and your aching cough will cease, your sleepless nights will give way to calm refreshing repose, your night sweats and diarrhea will cease altogether, and the much dreaded hectic flush will be exchanged for the pleasing one of ruddy health. n9 2p6t&1tW
