The New Orleans Daily Crescent.

Sabbath.

[illegible] believe that anything of the kind were [illegible] the following can be found in the [illegible] to-morrow morning, nay in any other [illegible] I tell the sacred morn, [illegible] when while all the fields are still, [illegible] calm on every breeze is borne, [illegible] sweeter perfect from the still, [illegible] the hill, [illegible] the flood from the flock— [illegible] a tone less shrill, [illegible] sacred Sabbath morn, [illegible] by in why drones; [illegible] yellow leaves strews; [illegible] sighed along the groves [illegible] drowsy wings in sweet repose; [illegible] cease to move; [illegible] the Rest morn arose.

Lane in a Graphic Picture.

Our readers will remember that ever since Jim Lane went to Kansas he has been the constant source of profane and strife. In all his rascality, in all his [illegible] movements, he has been sustained and [illegible] by James Redpath, the celebrated correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune, 1855-6 of the St. Louis Democrat, Chicago Tribune and Chicago Tribune. He was the [illegible] of all the [illegible] and the trumpeter of all the [illegible] Redpath commenced [illegible] called the "Crusader [illegible] Lane." Redpath's pen, but not by any [illegible] who is a vigorous [illegible] Lane has recently quarrelled about [illegible] and from the Crusader, of the 17th [illegible] portions of very graphic description [illegible] Redpath. Coming from one who [illegible] will be read with that confidence [illegible] is not generally entertained [illegible] extracts:

[illegible] Lane's Conversion to Abolitionist Denver.

[illegible] ready to swear in any cause of justice, or to [illegible] charge of the foul, that Gen. Lane is [illegible] Hall, Wilson, Denver, Shallenberg, [illegible] have him get out of the way by the secret or [illegible] Darkies.

[illegible] Lane's Virtue Revolts.

[illegible] thought that he could not be in earnest, but [illegible] subsequently ascertained, convinced me of my error. It was the corroboration of this [illegible] that determined us, at whatever cost, to throw [illegible] house viper off. It will cost us everything we [illegible] in Kansas; press, landed property, and business prospects; but we prefer to be free and poor [illegible] than to remain in the power of an assassin.

[illegible] Respect for Women.

[illegible] stated, also, that the widow should know who [illegible] Colter. If he has seen her since and did not [illegible] her, the fact should be mentioned as a [illegible] incident by his future biographer.

[illegible] Lane's Dying Compliment.

[illegible] MORNING, JUNE 4, 1858.

[illegible] are exhibited to Messrs. Lipscomb & Ar[illegible] Express for a Vicksburg Whig of yesterday morning.

[illegible] The official proceedings of the Common Council, [illegible] list of recorded for letters, together with much other matter, will be found on the inside pages of today's Crescent.

"Independent" Reform is a curious kind of article. It starts out by alleging that all sorts of abuses exist in the City Government, and that its particular mission is to correct those abuses. It then proceeds to make incendiary publications, to promise unnecessary and illegal things—to stimulate bad feeling—to stir up evil blood—and to array brother against brother, without honest incentive or reasonable justification—and finally winds up by forcibly assailing the ground works of society, repudiating the laws of the State, depredating upon the property of citizens, breaking up the courts, imprisoning and threatening voters, and nullifying alike the laws of the commonwealth and the ordinances of the corporation, in order that Major Beauregard, Sidell and the pensioned host of the Custom-House may triumph over right, truth, honor, law or justice.

This is the fact, deny it who dare. The partisans of the "Independents," paid, United States, or otherwise, have done all these things. They are guilty—most guilty—of outrages of the worst sort upon this community; and if blood flows, as we fear it will on Monday next, in melancholy profusion, they, and they alone, will be responsible for it! They have raised the storm—they have created the whirlwind.

Talk on "Change.

It is hardly necessary to allude to the general talk of yesterday. The early part of the day was consumed by our commercial friends in perusing their correspondence brought by the steamer Africa. As we have before intimated, there have been many accidents of cotton in Liverpool to meet bills against it, which does not augur very favorably for the documentary system. This is confirmed by the remarks of our correspondent in the following letter:

[illegible] Liverpool, May 15, 1858.

[illegible] information we have of hurricanes and floods, causing a shortening of cotton, and consequently a late crop, I now [illegible] a strong position in this market, and I think we shall see higher [illegible] and if the present consumption continues, prices must [illegible] considerably higher. Indeed, market rates would are this [illegible] the present scale but for the instability of the [illegible]

[illegible] supply of Surat cotton from India will be fully two to [illegible] bales less than last year. [illegible] "Bill Indian" cotton from Orleans in this season has been [illegible] unnoticed and sacrificed.

The water intelligence at hand yesterday was not the least encouraging. The water through the Point Lock Out crevasse is inundating a vast tract of acres of cotton. At first it was thought the damage would be very slight, under the opinion that the river Mississippi might recede. As this has not been realized, and the water continuing to extend, the damage is daily augmenting. The Hesperia crevasse, so [illegible] road, is proving an ugly customer, though Mr. Bolenes has not been specially engaged to stop it.

Vaniteen Theater.—Mrs. Menken's benefit and last appearance takes place to-night. "The Soldier's Daughter" and "The Happy Man" are the pieces. They will both be worth seeing, and Mrs. Menken deserves a good benefit.

Star Insurance Company.—See the notices of this company in another part of our paper.

A Passionate Judge.—George S. Selden, a Pittsburg lawyer, has been fined $500 and struck off the roll of Attorneys by Judge Irwin, of the U. S. District Court, for contempt of court. The alleged contempt was, that in a certain case in which Selden was concerned as Attorney, the Judge decided to do something which Selden said the court had no right to do. Judge Irwin told him that if he used such language to his honor again, he would strike him off the roll of Attorneys, and immediately adjourned the court; but Selden replied that he would like to see him do it.

There has been a private difficulty between Selden and the Judge, and from the report of the case in the Pittsburg papers, it would seem that Judge Irwin acted in a manner calculated to provoke Selden, and took advantage of his just indignation to declare him guilty of a contempt.

Steamboat Sunk.—The steamer Swan, Capt. Hayes, from Jefferson, Texas, arrived yesterday, having on board the clerk and other officers of the steamer W. R. Douglas. The clerk informs us that the Douglas left Jefferson for this port on the evening of the 27th ult., and at 9 o'clock the same night, when in Cypress Bayou, six miles above Benton, struck a tree, which threw the boat on to some stumps, tearing off one side of her hull. She went down in about three minutes and will be a total loss. Her cargo consisted of 38 bags wool only. No lives were lost.

Fatal Accident.—A singular accident occurred near Alston, S. C., on the 9th inst., which resulted in the death of Mr. Martin Goude. It appears that Mr. Goude was following close behind his wagon, to the back of which an extra horse had been tied, and while in the act of passing, the animal stumbled and pushed him off the bridge into the ditch below, where he was crushed by the horse falling upon him. He died in a few minutes.

[illegible] tification, have placed themselves beyond [illegible] the laws, a fuller account will be found [illegible] SESSIONS COURT.

The whole course of the Vigilance Comm[illegible] SOUTH [illegible] its armed myrmidons, has been marked by every [illegible] Closes [illegible] that is disreputable, lawless and anarchical. Tom [illegible] commenced their infamous work by burglary; they [illegible] continued it by plunder; they kept it up by arresting well-known citizens without the shadow of cause or authority; they maltreated Judges of our Courts; they caused forced adjournments of several of them; they obstructed the public highways of the metropolis; they injured the streets and crossings of the city, by taking up the iron bridges and constructing barricades; and in nothing have they demeaned themselves as good members of society, or as law and order abiding men.

With the words of law and order upon their lips, the supporters of Major Beauregard have violated all law and order—defied all law and order—and proclaimed revolution in our midst. In the name of Reform, they have committed burglary. In the name of Reform, they have plundered property. In the name of Reform, they have been guilty of as detestable acts as any which disgraced the worst era of the worst French Revolution.

Is this the entertainment to which the gentlemen signing the call which led to the formation of the Independent ticket, invited the people of New Orleans? Is this the Reform they would seek to inaugurate? Is this a way in which to remedy abuses? Is this their mode of teaching the rising generation lessons that will make them obey the regulations of civilized society, reverence the laws their elders make, and yield obedience thereto? Is this the manner in which security to property can be obtained? Is this the way in which the sanctity of the person of the individual citizen is to be vindicated? No—a thousand times no! A successful carrying out of the infamous measures already initiated to aid in the election of Major Beauregard, would result in the disruption of society, in insecurity to life and property, and in almost every conceivable thing which could tend to the debasement, degradation and infamy of New Orleans.

But, thank God, the reckless anarchists cannot succeed. They may hold the places they now hold, for a time, by means of plundered artillery, but they cannot hold them long. They cannot stay there forever, even if they are not removed by overpowering force. They cannot compel the election to go their way, by sword, cannon and bayonet. There are forty-seven precincts in this city. The traitors cannot force obedience at any or all; for the moment they get from behind their cannon, and disperse, and seek to intimidate the brave American thousands that swarm in this city, they will reap their reward, and will require none other on this sublunary sphere.

The infractions of the law which have taken place—this uprooting of all legal authority the friends of Major Beauregard have attempted, will eventuate in the defeat of the entire Independent ticket—and as we have friends on that ticket, gentlemen whom we admire and esteem, men of law, order and property—we think they should decline the positions they now unhappily hold, and unite with the American party in restoring the reign of quiet, which the machinations of the Sidellian Democratic wire-workers have so unfortunately interrupted, for, no matter how brief the period. Will they? We hope they will, for their own sakes, for their own characters, for their own property, for the honor of the city, and for the general conservation of society.

Killed.—On the 27th ult. Mr. Allen, one of the oldest settlers of Chester, Illinois, was thrown from his buggy and instantly killed.

Fire in the Forest.—At last accounts a fire was raging in the woods, five miles above Melville, New Jersey, with very little hopes of arresting the flames unless by a heavy rain. They are rapidly spreading in a northeast direction, and the woods extend forty-five miles in that direction. The fire was caused by the negligence of some charcoal burners.

To the Native-Born Independents: One who has native blood in his veins to the fifth generation, now calls upon you to know where you are, that nothing but the lowest scum of Germans and French are to do your fighting!—I except, of course, the "dozen" Americans who are fighting for their pocket. There are fifty Germans to one American now in possession of the city arms. Hereafter you may differ in your opinion as regards the administration of the laws, and of using force, you should have at least half your men native-born citizens. But to see all Germans on guard, and one of them with an extra size bowie knife in the air, shouting that he was going to take the lives of "the d——d American s——," is enough to make any American in that party bow his head in shame.

ONE WHO WOULD HAVE VOTED jes 2ptis THE INDEPENDENT TICKET.

To the Independent Voters of the Fourth Parish.—I was—was I am—an Independent Candidate for Recorder of the Fourth District, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

jes 2p JAS. C. WINGARD.

At the instance of many of my friends, I was induced to offer myself as candidate for the position of Assistant Alderman to represent the Eleventh Ward, Twenty-Third Precinct; but under the present aspect of things, I feel it as imperative duty to cease my utmost endeavors to further the cause of the party by which I am identified, and believe I shall be adding the cause by withdrawing from that position.

jes 2ptis Capt. DAVID G. HILL.
