GENERAL RESUME OF GOLDFIELD MINES

crease in the flow underground.

The Nevada Empress, at Gold Mountain, owned by the Nevada Co-Operative Mining company, has been kept going throughout January without the loss of a single shift. The snowfall in that quarter was the greatest on record and in sheltered spots banks 20 feet high indicate the force of the blizzard which raged almost continually for thirty days. The Empress is developed by a series of tunnels cut thru solid granite and there was no interference except to break trail from the boarding house down in the gulch up to the level of No. 7 tunnel, where the orebody opened up from a raise that reached a point 10 feet below tunnel No. 6 was proved up and penetrated for a distance of 15 feet. The quartz carried free gold plentifully sprinkled thru the rock and maintaining the high values found when the vein was recovered from the raise. The new crosscut proved that the vein had curved to the west and therefore eluded the old Sells management which tunneled mainly to find the vein winzed on from tunnel No. 6. Foreman Joe Mayer, on instructions from J. K. Turner, consulting engineer, found the orebody had swung out of regular angle in the downward projection, and is now working in tunnel No. 8 to place more backs in sight. This development ranks as a really important discovery as it will give President Sprague assurance of enough ore to warrant him in rebuilding the old mill. Reconstruction has been held in abeyance while mine development was pressed. The next step will be to decide on the capacity of the plant. The cost of treatment will be well within the preliminary estimates of cost, as the values can be saved by simple amalgamation.

From the present outlook the Consolidated oil flotation plant will be first to test the new process on the base ores of the camp. Material is arriving constantly and being installed as fast as it is unloaded from the cars. The Florence plant of 150 tons is later than the estimates of Manager Mead, who has been handicapped by slow deliveries and inclement weather which interfered sensibly with all outdoor work. The annual meeting of the Florence company will be held here on March 1st, when it is expected that President Parker will advise his stockholders of the precise terms of the contract with the oil flotation company.
