CONCERT BIG SUCCESS.

Splendid Program Rendered by Cadet Band Saturday Evening.

The free band concert given in the Red Jacket town hall last evening, by the Cadet band, proved one of the most enjoyable events of the season. The various numbers on the extended and difficult program were rendered with a precision and skill hardly to be expected from musicians so young. Several solo numbers were included. The band is composed of forty-six juveniles from eight to fifteen years of age, under the direction of George Wahlstrom. Practically every nationality is represented in the organization and it gives promise of becoming one of Calumet's most popular bands.

ITALIANS TO CONTRIBUTE $500 TO FLOOD VICTIMS

AMOUNT TO BE DESPATCHED TO RED CROSS QUARTERS ON WEDNESDAY.

Calumet Italians will this week send to headquarters of the American Red Cross society a sum amounting to $500 for the relief of Dayton flood sufferers. This amount was contributed entirely by the Italians of Calumet, Laurium and vicinity.

A canvass among residents of Mohawk, Wolverine and other surrounding localities resulted in the collection of about $200 and this has been augmented by $100 realized by a promenade Saturday night. To this is added the sum of $30 donated by five local societies and $20 collected at St. Mary's church yesterday. The response has been liberal and when the canvass is completed the total amount likely will aggregate $700. Hancock and South Range societies have inaugurated a canvass for funds and ten orders in that vicinity are aiding in the work.

Efforts of Italian ladies of Calumet who gracefully extended aid toward the promenade Saturday are appreciated and the executive committee extends its thanks to all who assisted in that event.

STEEL BRIDGES FOR D.S.S.& A.

Contracts Let to American Bridge Co. for Big Improvement

The South Shore railroad has taken on a new lease of life. The roadbed, buildings and equipment are being repaired, restored and rehabilitated. As rapidly as the work can be financed and carried out, the road is taking its place among modern railroads, with modern equipment and service.

Last summer, without much fuss or publicity, the South Shore went over the roadbed, making extensive repairs. It was the most complete overhauling the roadbed had received since it was first constructed. The South Shore is built for the most part through swampy territory and the difficulties in making a stable roadbed which the swamp land offered gave the South Shore its reputation for a rocky road. The roadbed is now in better condition than it ever was and is in about as good condition as any in this sections of the country.

This year, the good work is to go on. The American Bridge company has been awarded the contract for four bridges to replace wooden structures on the South Shore. One big viaduct 1,000 feet long will be placed over the Bad river near Shiloh, Wis., and another viaduct 700 feet long will go over Vaughn creek near the same town. Girder spans, each sixty feet long, will be constructed over the Montreal and Culver river near Saxon, Wis.

All four bridges will be of modern steel construction.

The South Shore has also ordered from the bridge company three big turntables to be installed at three new roundhouses to be built at Marquette, St. Ignace and Thomaston, division points.

After the construction of the steel bridges and the building of the roundhouses, the South Shore intends to add to its equipment several large modern locomotives. The strengthening of the bridges and the installation of the new turntables for larger roundhouses is made necessary by the proposed heavier equipment. When all the work is completed the South Shore will hold up its end with any railroad in the country.

OLYMPIC GAMES MUST REMAIN ON AMATEUR BASIS.

There is trouble over in England regarding the volume of power of various classes in the Olympic athletic games councils, some objecting to being placed on the same footing as those nominated by the governing body of archery, says T. S. Andrews.

The composition of the British council has always been a source of trouble, but for the life of me I cannot see what the governing bodies of golf, cricket, archery, polo and rackets have to do with the Olympic games. None of those sports were decided at the last games and it seems quite certain they will not be at Berlin in 1916, yet these delegates possess voting power of the same value as those representing athletics, swimming, wrestling and shooting, all of which form a considerable portion of every Olympic program.

A prominent sport writer of London in an article on the British failure at Stockholm, is very loud in his demands that future games should be open to both professional and amateur athletics, but he does not get any support from his brother scribes. He seems to forget the old saying that history repeats itself. The ancient Olympic games of Greece were first confined purely to amateur athletics of Greece, the rewards being nothing more than a branch of olive leaves taken from the sacred groves supposed to have been planted by Hercules.

As Grecian influence extended competitors were allowed from Egypt, Asia and other parts of Europe, and finally in the Roman period we find champions visiting the games from all parts of the empire. Professional athletes were not long in making their appearance, with the result that the far-famed games were degraded to the level of a dubious trade and they were suppressed by Emperor Theodosius in 394 A. D. That a similar fate would overtake the modern revival of the games appears to be practically certain. Buying and selling of athletes would take place and the celebration lose both its present international character and the very high patronage it now enjoys.
