ARTIST NOW LIVES A HAPPIER LIFE

Don Alphonse Zelaya, Talented Gentleman at Orpheum Theater, Has Lived Exciting Life Since in America.

Occupying the star position on the vaudeville bill at the Orpheum is a musician, soldier, artist and son of the deposed president of Nicaragua. Don Alphone Zelaya is a talented gentleman and one of the most important figures that has ever played the local vaudeville theater. He has been in this country for over 12 years, speaks English fluently, and has a wide acquaintance among the diplomats of Washington as well as in the higher musical circles. The story of his life is an interesting narrative of love intrigue, war, kidnaping, elopement and disheritance. In fact there isn't an element of fiction that this young man hasn't been mixed up in during his life, and yet he fits into his present occupation as easily as he did in all the stirring scenes of his early life.

His father, Jose Zelaya, was for 18 years president of Nicaragua—which little republic he ruled with an iron hand. Almost the first thing Alphone can remember is revolution—comic-opera war it is called by those who haven't been mixed up in it, but mighty serious business for the men who are struggling for their lives and everything else that is dear to them.

Meets Miss Lee.

Although the young man of the militant president preferred music and the arts to squelching revolutions, he was always willing to do his part. When about 18 years old he was sent to the United States to take a military course at West Point, but finally wound up in the diplomatic service in Washington where he was made much of for a time in social circles.

Then he met Marquerite Lee, a daughter of Sidney Smith Lee, a niece of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee and a granddaughter of Robert E. Lee. Although the young lady was but 17 years old and the boy less than 20, their friendship grew at such a terrific pace that the diplomatic dispatches to Nicaragua contained warning paragraphs.

Pres't Zelaya, quick to act from long practice in keeping his office, at once ordered his son to come home. But the young man replied that he liked the diplomatic life fine and was thinking of staying a while. The father insisted and when the boy remained obdurate, actually kidnaped him—an event which was chronicled in every newspaper in the country—and had him carried to Nicaragua by force.

But young Zelaya soon broke loose, returned to Washington, married Miss Lee—but they didn't live happily ever after. Pres't Zelaya, much incensed at the action of his son, disinherited him, cut off his allowance, and told him to hustle for himself and his bride.

Alphone Zelaya then turned to his music as a livelihood and was soon successful in securing profitable concert engagements. Pres't Zelaya, in spite of his seeming hard-heartedness, instructed his minister at Washington to keep an eye on the boy and when it was learned that he was succeeding as a public entertainer the paternal blessing was not long in forthcoming and Alphonse and his bride sailed for South America.

Things Begin to Happen.

Not long after they returned to the shelter of the home roof the big revolution broke out, the United States took a hand in the matter and things began to happen fast.

The Zelaya family escaped, the president went to Europe and Alphonse and his bride came to the United States where the musician took up his public engagements again.

He has played over some of the biggest circuits in the country, and is only filling in on this time before playing 20 weeks on the Pacific coast. From here he goes to Oklahoma City, his next jump being to Seattle, Wash.

Mrs. Zelaya, and their bright little son, accompany the father and as his salary is now something more than he received in the diplomatic service, they bid fair to live happily ever afterwards.

SINCE TAKING PERUNA

I can say my bowels are much more regular. My heart is stronger. My appetite is much better. My throat is much better.

Mrs. William H. Hinchliffe, 20 Myrtle St., Beverly, Mass., writes: "I have taken four bottles of Peruna, and I can say that it has done me a great deal of good for catarrh of the head and throat. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh. I do not think I ever felt much better. I am really surprised at the work I can do. I do not think too much praise can be said for Peruna."

Those who object to fluid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.
