SUCCESS—POWER

Know Your Faults

Faults corrected, need no excuses—but defense of a wrong action is a greater evil than the first offense.

Faults come thick and fast when you look for them in another. Increasing fault-finding decreases friendship-making.

To have a fault and correct it, is noble and true. But hide it—and you will make two.

When you excuse your faults, you belittle yourself. A great man conquers them.

The faulty man sees not his own faults—because his fault-finding efforts are devoted to the interests of other people.
