Can You Afford to Attend Missouri State University.

It frequently happens that when one is planning to attend school the matter of expense determinates the selection. The state realizes this in establishing the university as the cap-stone of the public school system, and in making the instruction offered there free of tuition to all. So at the university of Missouri there is no tuition in any department, consequently only board, books, transportation and clothing need be considered in estimating the expense of attendance.

Board can be had in the best homes of Columbia at from $3.00 to $4.50 per week, and in the University Boarding clubs, for which buildings have been erected by the state, at from $2.25 to $2.60 per week. This last includes room, meals, heat, light, laundry, etc. For the purchase of books, a "co-operative store" has been established under university authority in two rooms of academic hall. No profit is made by any one and whatever net income there may be is divided among the purchasers in proportion to the amount of their purchases. The result is that students get their books at wholesale price plus the expense of shipping, handling, etc. It has saved the student body a large sum of money this year. The store sells only to students. Besides free tuition, reasonable board, club houses and cheap books, there are many opportunities of working one's way through open to students of energy, skill and ability. The Y. M. C. A. conducts a bureau for getting work for students. Information along this line can be had by addressing the general secretary of Y. M. C. A., Columbia, Missouri.

Teacher's Involuntary Lesson.

"The girls treated principal and teachers with an exaggerated respect that they most certainly showed to no other mortal in the world," writes Mary Louise Graham of "My Boarding-School for Girls," in the Ladies' Home Journal for August. "They could not grasp the idea that they could talk to me as to any woman of my age at their homes. I don't quite know that I ought to tell what was the opening wedge, the beginning of the new order of things. I have never regretted it in spite of the fact that it was rather shocking, and that I was lame for days afterward. We were all assembled in the schoolroom for prayers. I sat down inadvertently on an optical delusion of a chair, and as I reached the floor I exclaimed involuntarily at the top of my lungs: 'The devil!' I wish to remark parenthetically that I am not in the habit of swearing, that I think it a most unladylike custom, and I would advise my girls against it if I ever dared approach the subject. In this instance my swearing was probably a case of atavism, my grandfather being a most ungodly old specimen of a Puritan. But, to return to that morning in the schoolroom, there was a silence which lasted about two seconds; then one girl giggled. Well, it ended with two cases of hysterics, and we didn't have any prayers that morning. But the episode proved that I was human, and so it was the beginning of better things."

Once a year the average citizen is very poor. On that day his horse is no better than his neighbor's horse. He is "poorly fixed" in his house and he is willing to admit that the Joneses and Smiths have much better furniture, better cows, more money and better farms. He has no money in the bank and no notes or credits, and that he is in debt about as much as he is worth. That is the day the assessor calls on him.—Ex.

These hot weather egg hatching stories seem to increase as the cool winds blow. A man living near the dump used by a crystalizing egg concern of Springfield has collected enough chickens hatched by the sun to stock a good sized poultry farm. The egg factory uses about 50,000 dozen eggs a day, all of which are carefully inspected. Three wagon loads of rejected eggs have been hauled outside the city limits and dumped each day during the hot weather. The man living in the neighborhood has visited the refuse every day for over a month and each time carries home a small brood of chickens which have been hached by the heat of the sun.—Ex.

Last year I came home from abroad. As we crossed the Atlantic and were in a fog the foghorn would blow, and it was very disagreeable, and yet the disagreeable noise was for our safety, and I wondered if we should not find out some time that the disagreeable things in our lives were really the means for our safety.—Mrs. Margaret Bottome, in the Ladies' Home Journal for August.

An Indian territory man was traveling through Arkansas with a native evangelist and after riding in silence for some time the territory man, who wished to be social, asked his companion where he was going. "I am on the road to heaven," he answered. "How long have you been on the road to heaven?" Eighteen years, my brother," said the evangelist in a deep voice. "Well, my friend," remarked the man as he reined in his horse, "if you have been on the road to heaven for eighteen years and are no farther than Arkansas, I don't care to travel with you. You are not more than a mile from hell right now."—Lehigh County Democrat.
