THE FEAST OF GUADALUPE.

At Which There Will be Bull Fights, Races, Chicken Mains, Indian Dances and Fireworks.

This feast was formerly held in accordance with a written contract made by the people in honor of St. Guadalupe, and was held as a religious celebration. Money to carry on the festivities was annually collected from the people. Latterly the city has taken charge of the arrangements, and the management has been placed in charge of a committee of citizens who purchased the right from the city.

On the first evening of the festival the city is illuminated and decorated. The amusement consists of music, dancing, and games. The Pueblo Indians begin their dance in full war costume on the eleventh, and continue all day and all night. There will be at least twenty in the dance at a time. Also a grand display of fireworks in Mexican emblems and designs in the evening. On the fourteenth and fifteenth the bull fights begin. The bulls to be used on this occasion will be brought from the interior part of the state of Chihuahua, and the celebrated white Durango bulls, and the finest and most ferocious will be selected. The fighters and carralleers, who are to be mounted on the best Mexican horses and in full Mexican costumes, are all old and experienced bull fighters, to be selected in Chihuahua for their courage and skill. A general amphitheater is to be erected on a high piece of ground near the Mexican Garrison, on the plaza and near the cathedral; that will seat from 8,000 to 10,000 people, with a grand music stand and stalls for all kinds of refreshments. On the plaza, or old ancient public square, with its seats and fountains, a large ampitheater will be erected for music, games and refreshments. The city for sixteen days will be given up to festivities. As this is a national festival of a favorite saint it will be a festival of the people, and Americans can see Mexico as it is, with its amusements.

On Christmas evening the hill tops and mountains will be illuminated by the Indians, and during the whole festival many interesting and novel amusements will take place, such as burro-processions, races, parades by Mexican soldiers, etc. The Mexican population of Colorado and New Mexico thoroughly understand this, and will be anxious to attend if low rates over the railroads are given. Thousands who used to attend on foot and horseback can now come by rail. To the Americans who have never seen a bull fight, this will be a grand opportunity, not only to see the Mexican games but the Mexican people, the old cathedral here, troops, etc.

If this festival should be freely advertised and low fares given, thousands would avail themselves of the opportunity to visit this city at that date. This feast of Gaudalupe is an old Mexican custom "as old as the hills," and is more celebrated in Chihuahua, Vera Cruze and the City of Mexico than it is on the border. This time the border will take the lead and do the best it can. To-day orders have come for rooms and accomodations from Chihuahua, Ysderas, San Elizario and even Santa Fe. Our people are all astir to be in readiness for the harvest. Many strangers are now here securing places to make money.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railways have agreed to carry passengers to and from the Feast over their lines for half fare.

The newly established postal carr factory at Castleton, in Rennselaed county, N. Y., employs about 130 men and women, who, assisted by the machinery, dispose of 18,000 pounds of paper and manufacture 3,250,000 postals every twenty-four hours. The contract calls for 2,000,000,000 cards in four years and was awarded to the Fort Orange Paper company. To manufacture the requisite pasteboards, 12,500,000 pounds of paper will be used. The mill runs day and night. The paper machine, which is the largest and most complete in the United States, has proved its capability by turning out a web of over twelve miles in length without a break.
