JUST PUBLISHED,
HOSPITAL SKETCHES:
By Miss L. M. ALCOTT.
Price 50 cts.

Several of the Sketches in this volume were published serially in The Commonwealth, and were widely copied by the press, receiving eulogistic notices from several journals, and calling forth many private letters of thanks from readers. A few extracts must suffice to show what was thought of them:

"They are received with universal favor."—[Commonwealth.

"Productions of uncommon merit. * * * Fluent and sparkling in style, with touches of quiet humor and lively wit, relieving what would otherwise be a topic too somber and sad, they are graphic in description and exhibit the healthful sentiments and sympathies of the cheerful heroism that would minister to the sick and suffering. The contrast between the comic incidents and the tragic experience of a single night, given in No. 2 of the series, is portrayed with singular power and effectiveness. 'The death of John' is a noble and touching feature."—[Boston Transcript.

"Graphically drawn. * * * Exceedingly well written—and the graver portions of thrilling interest. There is a quiet vein of humor, too, running all through them, so that the reader is alternately moved to laughter and tears."—[Waterbury American.

"To say that I thank you for writing them from the bottom of my heart would but poorly express the sentiment which dictate to me this tribute, and to say that I feel humbled by the lesson which they teach me is to pay a tribute to them which I fancy will be rather unexpected. These papers have revealed to me much that is characteristic and true, and noble in my soldiers' character which I never believe suspected. It is humiliating to me to think that I have been so long among them, with such mental or moral obviousness that I never discovered it for myself, and I think you for showing me with how different eyes and eyes you have striven among the men from the others which I used on the very same cases and at the same time."—[From a Hospital Surgeon.

[From Henry James.] * * * It would be tedious to you to hear how much pleasure an old man like me has taken in your charming pictures of hospital service, in the Commonwealth; and how refreshing he found the personal revelation there incidentally made of so much that is discreet and noble and womanly in woman; so I will not dwell on these particulars, but say all I have to say in this summary form: that I am so delighted with your beautiful papers, and so anxious they should of course reach their proper end, that I make the desire to stand myself among your friends. * * * With the liveliest respect and affection yours, HENRY JAMES.
