YOUNG SOLDIERS.—The Governor has, it is said, concluded to receive into State service a company of youths under the minimum military age. We refer to the Beauregard Cadets, Capt. Squires, whose evolutions on our streets have been so often seen and admired. These youths are already well drilled, but something of camp life is necessary to familiarize them with the duties and exposure of a soldier's life, and they are consequently to be sent into camp as soon as full.

That this is a good as well as novel plan, there can be little question. If the law recognizes young men of eighteen as capable of being soldiers, why are not those of less age capable of being apprentices to the art, so that by the time they are of sufficient age they will be not only soldiers, but accomplished ones. As a school of instruction, camp life would, doubtless, be advantageous to thousands of boys who, at present, are living in idleness, neither going to school nor able to find employment. It will be but a few months probably, at any rate, before they will be in the army. Why not let them enter upon its perils with the advantage of a thorough training and familiarity with its duties? For this company a few more are needed to fill up, and we commend the subject to the attention of patriotic parents.

TALK ON 'CHANGE.

The chief talk yesterday was in regard to the advance of the enemy towards Forts St. Philip and Jackson. There were many rumors afloat, but as usual, no responsible party could be found to answer for them, and they passed like many other dispatches, as unworthy of belief. There was something of a crowd around the passport office at certain hours of the day; but the applications were chiefly on the part of those going to the seat of war, such as we may designate by the title of the "Florence Nightengale Club," going to the fields of battle in the capacity of nurses.

There was very little talk about cotton, tobacco and other produce. True, the order of Major Gen. Lovell requiring all holders of tobacco, proprietors of warehouses, to report within five days the quantity of stock in their possession, was received with some astonishment and not comprehended at first; yet it will have to be comprehended, and holders of tobacco need not undertake to create a fuss about it, because the order is just and appropriate. It is reasonable to suppose that our authorities are desirous of ascertaining how much tobacco our quasi-friend, Mr. Napoleon the Third, may own in this good city, or rather what may be held for his account. We have heard that one party holds for his account 5000 hogsheads; other parties may hold more or less, but the entire information has to be furnished at the office of the Provost-Marshal; so all holders of the weed will take due notice.

Taking all things into consideration, Napoleon the Third has pursued a very equivocal, milk-and-water course towards the Southern Confederacy. He has been playing the fiddle to Earl Russell and the Exeter Hall clique of England. It is a very short distance from the warehouses where Mr. Napoleon's tobacco is stored to the Mississippi river. It can be given up to the Father of Rivers without applying the torch.

There was some inquiry about the French vessels in Hampton Roads awaiting to proceed to Richmond to load with tobacco. Possibly there may be French vessels awaiting at the mouth of the Mississippi to come to our levee. Well, we are one of those who think they can take it out in waiting. We don't want the gold of England nor France for cotton or tobacco. The gold of those two countries is useless, worthless to us at this time. They may send their vessels here with gold and silver for our cotton and tobacco, but not a pound of either article should be permitted to leave our shores. On the other hand, if they should send their manufactured goods, their cotton fabrics, their woollens; in fact, all commodities, salt, iron, blankets, leather, etc., we shall be one of those to extend them all facilities and fellowship. But we cannot coincide with some remarks that vessels of France or England should be permitted (out of courtesy, as the phrase is) to come to our shores in ballast to take cargoes of produce which cannot be obtained in any other market in the world. We again repeat, confound their gold and letters of credit, we don't want them. We are prepared to exchange commodities or productions of both sides in an equitable manner, but we are not prepared to allow the vessels of Mr Napoleon the Third nor Mr. Bull to come to our levee in ballast and take away our products. This is the talk on our flags.

There were some remarks about the communication via the lakes with Mobile. We are asked, will the Government furnish convoy, that is, by the gunboats on the lakes and in Mobile Bay, to steamers and vessels that may load with sugar and molasses bound hence for Mobile? It is the current talk that convoys should be tendered at least once a week to all vessels and steamers, the owners of which may be disposed to run the chances. We learn there are several good gunboats now on the lakes and in Mobile, which cannot be better employed than in giving protection and convoy to the trade between the two cities of Mobile and New Orleans. In fact, opening the intercourse with Mobile is a sizing and aiding the trade with all South Alabama, Georgia and West Florida.

We talked in our list of the enormous prices asked for sugar and molasses in Mobile. The remark may be extended to Georgia and Alabama. Our planters could realize the value of their crops of sugar if the intercourse with Mobile was free and unobstructed, and it can be made so.

The telegraph brought nothing of importance yesterday. The Colonel commanding at Union City was tolerably well denounced. The disgrace attending the Confederate forces is not so great as at first announced. It is, however, great enough.

A good feeling prevailed on the flags or among the habitues thereof, as the opinion is strong that the Yankee forces will receive a great defeat at the first pitched battle.
