TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 15, 1862.

TALK ON 'CHANGE.

The week opens very quietly, though there was a great deal of talk and retalk going on about fighting and bombardment of the forts below the city. There was some talk that the telegraphic dispatches were suppressed for the nonce. If the authorities had interfered, taken possession of the lines months ago, the Southern Confederacy would not have lost anything. The enemy has spies everywhere; they can use the telegraph day after day, communicating from the invading army above to the squadron at the mouths of the Mississippi. Some months since it was given out that no dispatches in cypher were permitted to pass over the lines. Has this resolution been carried out? We opine not. The time has, however, arrived for every dispatch coming over the wires to be subject to inspection on the part of the authorities; in fact, every dispatch coming over the wires should be subject to the inspection of a committee of well-known citizens before delivery.

The railroad cars for two days past have been bringing in many of the wounded in the great battles of the 6th and 7th at Shiloh. There are many hundreds yet remaining at Corinth in camp which require attention. Our citizens are doing all they can. There are some luxuries wanting which can be readily furnished. Oranges and lemons are wanted. Cannot our planters send forward many thousands? There are no doubt tens of thousands not gathered, which will answer a good purpose, a very beneficent one. There are a great many things required for the use of our hospitals; most every necessary, every little luxury will do much good. Our advertising columns will inform would-be donors where to send such donations.

A communication before us calls the attention of our authorities to the action of the City Council or authorities to the appropriation granted for the relief of the families of volunteers, both in the Confederate and State service. There are many families entirely destitute and suffering for the common wants of life. Many of these families never knew what want was before. The committees of the Council are urgently invoked in the communication before us to act in the premises speedily. True, our committees have a multiplicity of business to attend to, but the relief of these families are, in our view, the most pressing.

There have been many remarks about the course pursued by the authorities, the Provost-Marshals, in establishing a rate of prices. We have frequently stated that the rates established by our authorities would make Cresus of all growers, raisers of cereals and meats. In corroboration of our views, we append the following:

Comparative prices of Breadstuffs and Provisions in the cities of New Orleans and Richmond, taking the rates in advance of those fixed by the Provost-Marshals and the regular market prices in Richmond:

Within the past few weeks there has been an accumulation of people (citizens they may be) on our flags; Camp street, particularly, has been thronged. As for St. Charles street, it has been crowded. An old citizen sends us the following remarks. As we are knowing to the attempted exemption on the part of some able-bodied citizens, the remarks below are not out of place:

DEAR 'CHANGE—Knowing you to be anxious to contribute all in your power to advance the cause of our country, and as I am not on the flags daily, I think it incumbent on you to urge upon his Excellency, the Governor, the necessity of making every man here do something to the cause, let it be everyone his mite. Militia laws appears to be inoperative in many cases, owing to the fact that certificates of disability to carry arms are furnished to apparently strong and healthy young men, now to be seen leisurely sauntering about the streets. What I wish you to urge upon his Excellency is this: to collect from the commanders of regiments and companies, is not already in the possession of the Adjutant-General, all the certificates of disability furnished, and hand them over to Surgeon-General Stone, with authority to compel the attendance of all having such certificates of disability. I have no doubt he will place every man in position in a very short time to do service according to his capacity, in taking care of the wounded and attending upon our sick patients. It may be urged that there is no authority for this, but as we are now living under martial law, trifles must not be considered when the good of the country is at stake. VIDEX.

THE QUEEN SISTERS.—This charming young troupe are having a great success. The house at the Academy, last night was really astonishing for the last week in lent. "My Maryland" is a great card. We are glad to hear that these pleasant performances will be continued for some time longer.

MESSRS. McCERREN & LANDRY will sell to-day, at 10½ o'clock, the contents of a coffee-house corner St. Joseph and Front streets, consisting of glassware, furniture, etc. See advertisement.

R. MONTGOMERY & BRO. beg leave to call the attention of those in want of fine horses to their especial sales of fine saddle and harness horses, in pairs and single, which takes place this day, at 12 o'clock, at the Tattersall's stables, 134 Gravier street. For particulars, see advertisement.

TOSSED UP AGAIN.—After the battle of Elkhorn, on the 7th inst., our young friend and fellow-citizen Alex. Dalsheimer, son of L. Dalsheimer, and member of the Pelican Rifles, was missing from his company for several days. This intelligence came direct to his parents, and until yesterday they were in a painful state of suspense to learn his fate. Yesterday they received a letter from him, dated Fort Smith, March 27th, in which he recounts his hair-breadth escape from the enemy. According to his own account:

After the great battle, overcome with fatigue, unable to continue my march, I laid down on the floor of a house by the road side, a short distance from where we had been fighting; this was after dark; I slept soundly all night. Next morning I was awakened by a great confusion in and about the house, caused by the advance of two thousand Federal cavalry. I created being taken prisoner, and feeling considerably refreshed, I got up and broke for the woods. I wandered about for two hours and finally got lost. I was within hearing of the cannon all this time. This was Saturday morning; at last, after wandering about, I entered a house eight miles above the battle grounds. The man of that house I will recollect forever. When I got to his house, I was very sick, having a high fever. He put me to bed, from which I did not rise for four days, during which time he and his wife treated me as one of their own children; I told them who I was, and that if they would assist me they might say that they had done their duty as well as any soldier in the Southern army. To make the story short, he gave me old patched farmer's clothes, with which I disguised myself, passed for his son, went through the Federal camp and made my way here, where I arrived late yesterday evening. At some future time I will tell you all the particulars of my escape; but the regiment is on the eve of starting and I have no time just now. We are going to Ozark and from there to Pocahontas; you must know I was disclaimed because your own boys did not know me when I arrived. I walked 31 miles yesterday, 20 the day before; thank God I am safe.

When the news of the Merrimac's doings reached New York, propositions were seriously entertained for several days to sink obstructions in the shape of a stone fleet.

Local Intelligence.

PRESSING WANTS.—There are many things which our citizens can do with little trouble and scarcely any expense which would be of immense service to our hospitals in Tennessee. There are a great many of our best and bravest fellow-citizens lying there in the anguish of terrible wounds, their very lives dependent upon the excellence of the treatment which they will experience. Most of them, if not all, have fine medical attendance, but in a remote and sparsely settled section of this country like that, many luxuries and appliances, almost indispensable to the sick and wounded, cannot be obtained.

We have heard direct, for instance, from Dr. Stallo, of the Crescent Regiment, that numbers of articles are much needed: towels, cups, plates, pitcher and corks, lint, splinters, medicines, and even various of the more delicate articles of food. Tongues, chickens, hams, buiscuit, tomato sauce, etc., would all be highly acceptable. There will not be the least difficulty about sending them. Just leave them at Dr. Synes' drug store, No. 134 Canal street, and they will be sent along with other articles of a similar nature which he's about to forward.

Many may think that what they could send would be so small as not to be worth anything; and yet if every family would send just that amount, the hospitals would be overflowed with supplies. The idea is, not to get people to send large amounts, but to induce everybody to send some small offering and to send it immediately. Shoes, socks, blankets, almost everything, will be useful to the convalescent.

ABOLITIONISTS AND SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS.—These persons seem to be multiplying or growing more bold, or our authorities are perhaps growing more watchful. Louis Helman was arrested on Sunday last, charged with abolitionism, coupled with the act of passing counterfeit money. Peter Paul, L. Glomberg and George Else have also been taken in charge, as being dangerous and suspicious characters.

COVETING ANOTHER'S PROPERTY.—George Hernandez was arrested lately, charged by Mr. Chapsky with entering his store with intent to steal. Henry Brown was arrested, charged with a forgery, and John Hennigan, charged with larceny.

IN PRISON.—Richard Dolahinty, lately arrested for dangerously wounding John McGwin in the breast, was yesterday brought before Recorder Seith for examination, and there being no satisfactory certificate produced that McGwin was out of danger, he was remanded to prison to await the result of the wound.

CHANGE IN THE POSTOFFICE.—We clip the following announcement from the last number of the Catholic Standard:

New Orleans Postoffice.—We learn that Mr. Leonce Burthe, of the mercantile firm of Burthe & Higgins, has received the appointment of Postmaster in this city, vice Dr. Riddell resigned.

We anticipate that Mr. Burthe will give full satisfaction to the community. A more courteous, amiable and high minded gentleman we do not know in our commercial circles. He is a native Louisianian.

COTTON TWICE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.—The bark Thomas N. House arrived at this port on Saturday from Liverpool, having on board, among other merchandise, 1337 bales of cotton. The cotton was sent to Liverpool from Boston, a year ago, valued at 12 cents per pound. It is now worth 31 cents. Allowing for freights, the owners will realize a profit of over 150 per cent. This is returning cargoes with a profit. [Boston Post.

The Battles of the 6th and 7th, in Southern Tennessee—Sorties and Incidents on the Field.

From our Special Correspondent.

CAMP MCPHERSON, (near Corinth,) April 5, 1862.

Mr. Editor—By what most of us regard as a special interposition of Providence in our behalf, the Crescent Regiment has been permitted to remain in one place for some ten or twelve days, but it is now again under marching orders, and at any moment we may strike tents and start for the Yankee den on the Tennessee river—proposing to drive the onion-eating monsters with fire and steel out from the former, and, maybap, into the latter.

I do not know, however, whether it is intended to force the enemy into a decisive battle, by attacking him, or only to draw him into the country, beyond the range of his gun-boats, and endeavor to cut him off. I think that the force to be sent out is very large.

We are getting ready to march, and notice is just now given that we move in an hour.

CAMP ADVANCE, April 4, 1862.

No opportunity to mail my letter of yesterday, and how soon I may have one I don't know. We started late in the afternoon, and, taking nothing but our arms and blankets, bivouacked within a stone's throw of our old camp, nearly half way between Corinth and the Tennessee river. The march has been fatiguing, more from its duration than its length. From all that I can learn, the main body of our army is pouring along by different roads towards the Tennessee, and we anticipate a tremendous struggle with the Federal forces, now in possession of nearly the whole country between this point and their base of operations on that river. There is a continuous stream of infantry, cavalry and artillery over our line of march, and the magnitude of the movement clearly points to a resolute and decisive attack. Johnston is in command, assisted by Gens. Beauregard, Polk, Bragg, Hardee, Bladden, Chalmers and Hughes. If that be not a strong team, the South may as well no longer put her faith in generalship, but rely upon guerrilla warfare, bushwhacking, and the indomitable pluck of her sons. I suppose these great chieftains have in council decided upon the strategy of the movement, and, God grant that, in its execution, the old adage may not be verified—"too many cooks spoil the broth," a complaint that is often made in our mess.

SATURDAY, April 5.—After a refreshing night rest in the open air on Thursday night we continued our march, much retarded by the Sabbath-like advance of the heavy columns. At Monterey, a little country town, about twelve or fourteen miles from Corinth, we halted two or three hours, and while there two Confederate soldiers were shot by order of a court martial, one for desertion and the other for pillage. A few miles further brought us within sound of a skirmish between our advance cavalry and a body of the enemy, and soon afterwards we met a detachment of the former in charge of nine prisoners, one of whom (a Major) stated that the Federals expected a break with
