A Conceit.

I've somewhere read in olden tales—
Such as the Persian poet sing,
That in the fragrant Eastern vale
Are birds with but a single wing.

And books and links of solid bone
The waste of missing wings supply,
And thus, when either lord alone
Essays through boundless space to fly

Each lacks the other, better part,
Which being by its mate supplied,
They, linked together, heart to heart,
With hopeful wings can upward glide—

Each bird, depending on its mate,
Thus finds the need of being true,
Each bears to part the other's weight,
And thus is formed a perfect pair.

And so I've thought, the human heart
Will often, in its prison dwell,
And languish till its counterpart
Is brought within its subtle spell.

Like these rare birds of Eastern clime,
It strives in vain to leave the earth
Until at Fate's appointed time
It finds a mate of equal worth.

And then bound fast with bonds of love,
More lasting far than books of bone,
The twain can soar to realms above—
Two souls in form—in love but one.

—Anon.

Miscellaneous.

The rockers of bamboo rocking chairs are now painted either a bright blue or red.

A little tomato catsup is a great addition to a mixture of cold boiled ham, mustard, etc., for sandwiches.

Loose pointed jackets and plaited blouse bodices will be worn in wool dresses made as they were during the summer.

Literary matron: "What does Shakspeare mean by his frequent use of the phrase "go to?" Matter-of-fact husband: "Well, perhaps he didn't think it would be polite to finish the sentence."

A certain little Pharisee, who was praying for his big brother, had a good deal of human nature in him if he was only six years old. He prayed, "Oh, Lord, bless brother Bill and make him as good a boy as I am."

M. Girard, Director of the Paris Municipal Laboratory, says that the chemical knowledge applied to the concoction of spurious foods and drinks is of a very high order, and would suffice to make the fortunes of the adulterators a dozen times over if applied in an honest capacity.

A good way to extract the juice of beef for an invalid is to broil the beef on a gridiron for a few minutes and then squeeze the juice from it with a lemon squeezer. Put a little salt with it. This may be given, as the sick one prefers, cold or hot, or it may be frozen and given in small lumps.

"Job printing!" exclaimed an old lady, the other day, as she peeped over her spectacles at the advertising page of a country paper. "Poor Job! They've kept him printing, week after week, ever since I learnt to read; and if he wasn't the patientest man that ever was, he never could have stood it so long no how!"

The knot or nautical mile is variously estimated at from 6076 to 6125 feet. According to the standard of the British Admiralty, the knot is the length of one minute of longitude at the equator, or 6086 feet, 1.1527 statute miles or 1855 metres. The mean length of latitude, sometimes reckoned as a knot, is 5076 feet, 1.151 statute miles or 1852 metres. A marine league is three of these sea miles.

So many of the small fruits, such as plums, etc., are deliciously pickled that a general rule for making a sweet pickle is desirable. To seven pounds of fruit take two pounds of sugar, one quart of vinegar and spices to your taste. Cassia buds make a very delicate flavor, but are somewhat expensive when compared with other spices.

If the recently published conclusions of Dr. Joire, the physician to a large tobacco factory at Lille, France, are based on accurate observation and full statistics they are very important, because they dispose of a great deal of sentimental claptrap which has been published from time to time. He asserts—the paper may be read in its entirety in the Annales of Hygiene Publique—that tobacco exercises no deleterious effect upon females during their peculiar physiological conditions nor upon the health of their offspring.

A lady preacher says: "Every time a young man takes a glass of beer he swallows about five bricks. Calculate how many bricks you swallow in a day and then calculate how many you swallow in a year. Count the bricks by years and you will find how long it will take to swallow a house. Boys on the street corner smoking turn up brick after brick and destroy their manhood."

The Louisville Courier Journal says rapturously of an actress: "Her Galatea is a benison—like a babe that opens its wide eyes for a moment on the world, and leaves it with a sigh like a flower that breathes its fragrance for a day upon the earth of which it is not; like a grand strain of music that floats and throbs at twilight, and sinks away into the dim reaches of which we dream, but in which we cannot walk; too pure for the world, yet leaving behind a memory, a perfume, a harmony, tenderer, sweeter, more exalting." etc.

Recent official returns give the following as the proportion of English, Scotch and Irish soldiers in the British army: Cavalry—English, 7,008; Irish, 1,624; Scotch, 689. Royal Artillery—English, 1,366; Irish, 2,373; Scotch, 966. Royal Engineers—English, 2,633; Irish, 372; Scotch, 218. Infantry—English, 34,824; Irish, 14,070; Scotch, 4,650. Household Cavalry—English, 911; Irish, 90; Scotch, 198. Foot Guards—English, 1,260; Irish, 355; Scotch, 828.

From English statistics extending over thirty-six years, a writer in a German scientific journal concludes that the wheatcrop is mainly determined by the state of the weather in July and August—the higher the temperature and the smaller the rainfall in those two months the better the harvest. The best harvest was that of 1868, with a temperature for the two months of 4.1 Fahrenheit degrees above the average, and a rainfall of 2.71 inches below the average; while the poorest yield was that of 1860, with a deficiency of temperature of 1.6 degrees, and an excess of 2.6 inches of rain.

The librarian of the Bibliotheca Laurentiana of Florence has made a discovery that he thinks important. He has unearthed a manuscript containing many pen and pencil designs of ornamental and architectural objects, and also an admirably written text treating of the manner of measuring, distant objects, of fortifying towns, preparing artillery, and giving form and proportion to daggers. The finder has little doubt that the author of this work is Benvenuto Cellini, because, besides the nature of the studies, the diction, and the designs, the words "Cell. Fior," are to be read in the book, showing that we have to do with a rough sketch of an unknown work by the great Florentine goldsmith.

The deepest sea-sounding ever made, says the Scientific American, was made in the Pacific ocean near the entrance to the Behring sea. Bottom was struck at 4,655 fathoms. The cast was made from the United States school-ship Tuscarora. The shallowest water in the middle of the Atlantic, 781 fathoms, shows the subsidence of mountains 10,536 feet.

For a considerable time glucose has been made in Germany from old rags. Sulphuric acid converts the rags into dextrine, which is treated with a milk of lime, and is then subjected to a new bath of sulphuric acid, when it becomes converted into glucose. The glucose is identical with that of commerce, and may be used in the same way for confections, ices, etc. A large number of substances are capable of similar transformation into glucose.

Rice constitutes nearly one half of the food of the people of Japan. But as to food and drink, climatic conditions and industrial demands do not as yet exercise their due influence on the writers of works on hygiene when forming their conclusions. One race may live and move and have a tolerably useful existence in a certain region, upon a sort of sustenance altogether inadequate to another race differently environed. Suppose for instance, and to put this important question sharply and strongly, the diet of an Esquimaux and an inhabitant of the tropics were interchanged, on the strength of local sanitary statistics, would not the chances of each specifily reaching the grave be about equal, and the lease of life of both be considerably shortened?

An exchange tells of a man who got mad at an editor and stopped his paper. The next week he sold his grain below market price, and was $200 out of pocket. He lost track of the time limit in which to pay his taxes, and squared up by paying a round penalty in addition to his assessment. He went shooting out of the game season, was arrested, hauled before a magistrate and mulcted in a round sum of fine and costs. He paid $300 for a lot of forged notes that had been advertised for two weeks and the public cautioned not to negotiate them. He then paid a big Irishman, with a foot on him like a foe a hammer, to kick him all the way to the newspaper office, where he paid for four years subscription in advance, and made the editor sign an agreement to kneek him down and rob him if he ever ordered his paper stopped again. Such is life without a newspaper.

IDLE GOSSIP.

THERE IS NO IDLE GOSSIP HOWEVER, that the undersigned will take Portraits in any style, or views to order in the best style of the Photographic Art, and on the most Reasonable Terms—but it is idle gossip which says "he will not try to please." For he always was and will be willing to please everyone who can be pleased; and never treated anyone out of the way, and never will treat anyone otherwise than in a proper manner. Do not listen to gossip, but come and see for yourself—there is always two sides to a story. (990 3m) H. L. CHASE.
