liberty and democracy in Europe? Look what already has been done with Mexico, and now is attempted in Peru. But the day will come when the United States, free of international war, will extend her protecting arms toward the ill-treated younger American Republics, and I only pray God to preserve me until that work is finished, in which I must have my part as a Republican.

DANIEL S. DICKINSON has written this characteristic letter to General CASS, as a Democrat of the Jackson school, urging him to espouse warmly the Union side:

BINGHAMTON, Sept. 26, 1864.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The Presidential campaign is again upon us in fearful earnest, and I have no doubt you would unite with me in praying that, if possible, at such a time as this the cup might pass. But the question cannot be put aside, and must be met with all its responsibilities. I have no attachment to either of the candidates, nor any antipathies against them, to move me a hair either way; and I am so filled with disgust at the mean selfishness, the prevailing littleness and downright knavery of political parties, that were there no questions beyond those of ordinary moment, I would not cross the street to turn the scale for or against either. But I regard the present struggle as vital and essential to national honor—yes, existence. It seems that Baltimore and Chicago have framed issues for us, and Mr. Lincoln and Gen. McClellan are and must be the representatives, respectively, of these great antagonisms, and that as a people we must stand or fall by the result. However much Mr. Lincoln may pretend to be peace or Gen. McClellan to be war before election, we all know that good faith and common honesty will force the one elected to carry out in the administration doctrines laid down by the Convention which placed him in nomination. Should Gen. McClellan be elected all will, in my judgment, be lost. The patriotic, self-sustaining, reliant feeling of the Union men will be overthrown and crushed out; Rebellion will be rampant and intoxicated with success; the worst elements that the loyal States can produce will be in the market for Southern purchase, and foreign interference will come with all its hypocritical insolence, and, under the pretense of staying the effusion of blood, will secretly destroy us. I hope you will concur in my idea that it is the duty of every patriot, and of none more so than Democrats of the Jackson school, to espouse warmly the Union side. And I hope you will let your voice be heard and your views known at an early day. I am sure they will exert a powerful and healthy influence upon the public mind.

I send you herewith a sketch of some remarks made by me recently, on taking the chair at a Union mass meeting, and from them you may gather my opinions somewhat in extenso. I have been kindly invited to Detroit, and if I can find time for a brief trip, mean to accept, but it is very uncertain indeed whether I can do so. Sincerely yours, D. S. DICKINSON.

Hon. Lewis Cass.

The frequent halts of the McClellan procession in Cleveland, last Monday night, puzzled the Unionists who watched it—one halt in particular, quite protracted, near the head of Vineyard-lane, and which was marked with an incessant firing of the "Little Mac" cannon. The stops were made to deploy portions of the procession that had reached Vineyard-lane around on Long and Champlain-streets to come again into Superior-street at the rear of the column. The trick was played four times during the march down Superior-street. It was well done; and the Marshal, while the flank movement was making, went up and down the line on Superior-street urging the boys to "holler like thunder." The Pennsylvania ballot-box stuffers, while substantially repeating this joke last Tuesday, had their "hollering like thunder" done for them by The New-York World.

Honor to the Patriot of whom a Pennsylvania correspondent thus writes:

"A thrilling incident occurred during the voting in the 18th Ward to-day. An old man over seventy years of age advanced to the window, leaning tremblingly on his staff, when an officious Copperhead vote distributor approached him, and thrusting a ticket in his face said, 'Here is an old Jackson Democrat who always votes a straight ticket.' The old man opened the ballot and held it with trembling fingers, until he had read one or two of the names, flung it from him, and in a voice shaky with emotion exclaimed: 'I despise you more than I hate the Rebel who sent his bullet through my dead son's heart! Do you expect me to dishonor my poor boy's memory, and vote for men who charge American soldiers, fighting for their country, with being hirelings and murderers?' The Union ticket was given him, and room was reverently made for the true-hearted old patriot by the hushed and admiring knot around the window."

That neither the soldiers nor the soldiers' friends can be cheated into McClellanism, let this true tale attest!

The Democracy at Chicago made the Satan of Disunion grin by their resolution to "adhere to the Union in the future as in the past." The word was borrowed from the adhesiveness of our letter envelopes, which never stick except they are linked. But what of mucilage or gum-arabic there is in the party, seems to be presently needed to maintain its own union of breath and body. Four letters of the alphabet, S. L. M. B., whispered pallid yesterday to the other twenty-two, "The Peace Democrats in Indiana didn't vote! This d—d Abolition war has entered our own household." Yea, verily; and antiquaries will hunt for the political fragments of you fellows with the curious interest which attaches to Sodom and Gomorrah.

There is a vindictive answer to Indiana brewing in the breasts of the Democratic National managers in this city. 'T was whispered yesterday among the gloomy, that the agent of the Rothschilds and the unknown owners of The World thought of taking measures to force Pendleton off the ticket. Excellent! homicidally considered, and suicidally also. But no amount of imitation of the melodrams of Jonah and the whale can allay this Republican storm which is wrecking sham Democracy and drowning Slavery.

What a frightful wrong was done to the Democracy, and to fair-play, and to free institutions, in furloughing the sick and wounded Indiana soldiers! The Copperheads have hissed themselves hoarse over the following order:

[COPY.]

WAR DEPARTMENT.

The Surgeon-General will give an order to all hospitals for the furlough of all sick and wounded soldiers of Indiana, to go to their respective homes after the 1st day of October and until the 15th, giving them transportation both ways, to enable them to exercise the elective franchise at the State election.

E. M. STANTON.

A true copy: C. H. CRANE, Surgeon U. S. A.

There never was a more quiet, peaceful, ay, and good-natured political contest, than that in Philadelphia, on Tuesday. What a grand testimony to the power of law and the strength of popular government, that the brutal instructions of the Chicago Conventionists and of the McClellan newspapers to the voters of the Democratic ticket, to have a free fight with their free balloting, could not overcome, in the second largest city on this continent, the love of order and the habit of obedience!

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL thus characteristically describes the Chicago Copperhead crowd that nominated McClellan:

"The Convention was a rag-bag of dissent. All the odds and ends of personal discontent, every shred of private grudge, every rag snipped off by official shears, scraps of Rebel gray, the leavings of Union blue—all had been gathered, as if for the tailoring of Joseph's coat. That a Hebrew should be chosen to call such a motley collection to order, was a matter of instinct."

The Journal of Commerce repeats the often-exposed falsehood that the Democratic party "gained two thousand votes" at the late election in Maine. The Journal once had the reputation of giving trustworthy returns, but, since it became a mere tender to the reckless World, it seems to have lost all regard for truth. The Democratic vote in Maine, in 1863, was 50,233; last month it was 46,476—showing an actual loss of 3,757. This is the truth. Any statement that the Democratic strength was more in Maine last month than it was last year is untrue, and the authors thereof are guilty of forgery. From The World we expect nothing better; but there are Democratic papers not quite so shameless.

The Richmond papers, chronicling Ben. Butler's storming of the Rebel defenses on Chapin's Farm, said "the Yanks didn't stop when they got over the outer line, but went right on." Unionists! we have run over the Rebel sympathizers in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana—don't let us stop a moment, but press right on to their positions in every Northern and Western State. Forward!

A party of New-London Democrats went to Norwich to attend a ratification meeting, the other night; and on the way beat the captain of the boat shamefully because he kept no bar. The captain started a McClellan man, but returned a Unionist.

At Winchester, when Emory, General of the Nineteenth Corps, dispatched his aid to Sheridan to tell him he had charged the enemy, the latter said: "Good! tell Emory he is a brick." We send greeting to Indiana, and say, "Dear Hoosier State, you are a whole brick-kiln."

"Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings" is true now as in the days of the Psalmist. Do readers remember Rebecca, the little white slave-girl from the South? There was a whole column of argument in her answer, when she was asked if she would vote for McClellan: "If I were a Rebel, I would!"

Death of Chief-Justice Taney.

Roger Brooke Taney, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, died in Washington on Wednesday evening, Oct. 12, after an illness of a few days. Descended from a family of English Roman Catholics which settled in Maryland about the middle of the seventeenth century, he was born in Calvert County, Md., March 17, 1777, and was consequently in his eighty-eighth year at the time of his death. He was graduated at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., in 1795, admitted in 1799 to the bar of his native county, from which he was elected a delegate to the General Assembly, and in 1801 removed his place of residence to Frederick. In 1822 he removed to Baltimore, having previously served as Senator in the Legislature of the State during a term of four years. He was appointed Attorney-General of Maryland in 1827, and in 1831 was appointed Attorney-General of the United States by President Jackson. During the contest of the Administration with the Bank of the United States, upon the dismissal of Mr. Duane from the office of Secretary of Treasury, Sept. 23, 1833, on account of his refusal to remove the deposits, Mr. Taney was appointed his successor, and immediately ordered the transfer of the deposits to the local banks selected by him as the agents of the Government. The Senate refused to confirm the nomination by a vote of 28 to 18, in June, 1834. In the following year, he was nominated by President Jackson as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, but he was virtually rejected by the Senate, which indefinitely postponed the consideration of the subject on the last day of the term. Upon the death of Chief-Justice Marshall, he was appointed his successor by President Jackson, and was confirmed by the Senate in March, 1836, that body having changed its political relations. He took his seat upon the Supreme bench in January, 1837, and held the office until the time of his death. Chief-Justice Taney gained an unenviable notoriety by his famous decision in the Dred Scott case, ruling that "negroes, whether slaves or free, were regarded for a long time previous to the Declaration of Independence as beings of an inferior order, with no rights which the white man was bound to respect," and therefore were not included among the "people" in the terms of that instrument, and had no claims to be regarded as citizens of the United States.

A Card.

To the Editor of The N. Y. Tribune.

SIR: I have seen, with no less surprise than regret, the following paragraph, copied into THE TRIBUNE of the 10th inst. Whether it originated with some American partisan politician, equally reckless of the truth or falsehood of his assertions, or with some cowardly and malicious enemy of the Fenian Brotherhood and the 69th Regt., N. G. S. N. Y., a portion of which is composed of members of that organization, I feel called upon to pronounce it totally untrue. No such demonstration as that herein mentioned ever took place in the Camp of the 69th Regiment.

"The Chicago Times prints the result of several votes taken on cars between Boston and Toledo, Ohio, showing out 117 majority for McClellan. In the same article, headed 'Expressions of Popular Sentiment,' the editor prints this:

"'I was in Capt. O'Mahony's camp of the Fenian Brotherhood, Elmira, N. Y., now guarding Rebel prisoners, and, when I was there, there was a vote taken, and every man in the Regiment voted for McClellan unanimously, and he was ridden on a rail round the camp till he said he would vote for Mac. Fremont.'

"It strikes us that this way of converting political heretics is slightly rough."

As individuals, the soldiers of the 69th Regiment are entitled to the free expression of their political opinions as well as any other citizens of their fellow-citizens. But they are here in camp not as citizens but as soldiers, and thus neither have forgotten nor shall forget that this is a regiment, not an electioneering club. Again, as soldiers the 69th know no brotherhood but the Union and Constitution of this American Republic. This is the camp of the 69th Regiment, and not, as above stated, of "the Fenian Brotherhood."

With respect to the latter organization, as its presiding officer, I assert that it has not yet connected itself with any of the parties that distract this country. Its object is not American, but Irish. It is one for which the friends of Ireland may combine together in harmony upon a common platform, be they "Democrats" or "Republicans," without distinction of creed, party or place of nativity.

Any attempt to introduce American party politics into its councils, or to use it in any way as a party engine, subjects the man making it to immediate expulsion. This rule has been rigorously adhered to since the origin of the Brotherhood, and shall be while it exists as an organized body. Outside the Brotherhood its members may act as their reason or conscience may direct. Within it they must abstain from two things especially—religious controversy and American party politics.

This I feel bound to say in vindication both of the 69th Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., and the Fenian Brotherhood, without expressing any opinion upon the great electoral question now before the country. Though apart from my military duties and my connection with the Fenian Brotherhood, I do not forego my individual right to express them freely, in proper time and place.

I remain, dear Sir, yours, very faithfully,

JOHN O'MAHONY, A. C. F. B.

The National Banking Currency not Counterfeited.

To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune.

SIR: Among your Law Reports this morning is a case before U. S. Commissioner Osborn of Thomas Cumming, arrested for "passing, uttering and publishing certain false and spurious National Bank notes of the denomination of $10." The notes in question were not counterfeits of the National Currency ten dollar note, but belonged to the batch of partially signed sheets of the tens of the First National Bank of Bennington, Vt., stolen from the Bank Officers at the Astor House. No counterfeits of the National Currency exist. W.

New-York, October 13, 1864.

PUBLIC CARTAGE.—Mr. Collector Draper is, we understand, about to effect a reform in one department of the Custom House interests, which seems likely to be both creditable and useful. This is the Public Cartage business; i. e., the transportation of goods from ships to bonded warehouses, and between other points while under Government control. The money paid for this cartage is about $300,000 a year, and a practice of long standing has kept it within the control of a few parties. These have managed to incommode and discourage cartmen not "in the ring," and merchants who employed them. What Collector Draper intends is, to place this Public Cartage business upon a footing of open and fair, free competition, like any other business. This will prevent much inconvenience to merchants, and will largely benefit the cartmen, beside that it is intrinsically right.

DANVILLE, Penn., June 2, 1862.

DR. WM. H. GREGO—Dear Sir: In February, 1861, I was afflicted with sugar diabetes, and for five months I passed more than two gallons of water in twenty-four hours. I was obliged to get up as often as ten or twelve times during the night, and in five months I lost about fifty pounds in weight. During the month of July, 1861, I procured two bottles of Constitution Water, and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured, soon after regaining my usual good health.

Yours truly, J. V. L. DEWITT.
