Instruction.

A CLERGYMAN of excellent character, high scholarship, and gentlemanly deportment, who was graduated some 12 years since from one of our best Colleges, and has since exhibited great earnestness, skill, and success in the training of youth, being about to travel and reside in Europe a few years, with his family and a portion of the very select family school he is teaching near New-York, would take one or two other boys, of 10 to 14 years of age, to make up a pleasant number for the tour and foreign residence. A rare opportunity is thus offered to parents wishing to advance a son in Classical Literature, Modern Languages, Science, and the common branches of a practical education, while enjoying at the same time the choicest society and a wide range of observation by travel in vacations. For more particular information, and for an introduction, if desired, to the gentleman and lady at the head of this family, inquiry may be made of J. A. NASH & N. H. CAMP, No. 5 Beekman-st., N.
