LITERARY ITEMS.

Mr. James Spedding, well-known for his elegant edition of Lord Bacon's works, which was republished not long ago in this country, has addressed a note to The London Daily News in explanation of a certain letter to which allusion was made by Lord Houghton (R. Monckton Milnes), at the last anniversary dinner of the Royal Literary Fund. We quote a few passages from Mr. Spedding's communication, which will be interesting to American publishers and authors: "It was a letter addressed to myself by Mr. H. O. Houghton, proprietor of The Riverside Press, Cambridge, United States, and inclosed an account of the number of volumes of Bacon's works sold during the year 1865, together with a remittance (presented to me as the principal editor of the best English edition—of the text of which it is a very elegant and accurate reprint) of five per cent upon the retail price of each volume sold. The book, of which the publication was commenced in 1861 and completed in 1864, though printed by Mr. Houghton, was the property of Messrs. Brown & Taggard of Boston; and it was not till the beginning of the year that Mr. Houghton, in connection with Mr. Hurd of New-York, became the proprietor. It is due to these gentlemen to add that the notion of paying a copyright to me originated entirely with themselves, and was not in any way either directly or indirectly suggested by myself; for when I was informed of the project, I merely expressed the satisfaction which I felt in hearing that the book was thought worth publishing in America, and my best wishes for the success of the enterprise. But there seems to be no reason why such an arrangement should not be made beforehand in the regular way of business; and, in the absence of an international copyright, English authors will be glad to know that there is a publishing house in America which will engage to pay them copyright for their works in the shape of a percentage upon the retail price of the books sold."

Mr. Philip Stanhope Worsley, who will be remembered as the author of a translation of the Odyssey into Spenserian verse, which was published in London last year and very favorably received, died on the 8th of May at Freshwater, in the Isle of Wight. Mr. Worsley first became known in the literary world, we believe, by his poetical contributions to Blackwood's Magazine. In 1863 he issued a volume of "Poems and Translations," which displayed a great deal of elegance and scholarship and a facility of poetic expression, though they were wanting in warmth and sympathetic feeling. At the time of his death he had completed 12 books of a translation of the Iliad. He was a contributor to The Athenæum, The London Review, The Reader, and other literary periodicals.

ECCE HOMO.
Who shall decide it? That is the question. The much respected pastor of one of the most influential orthodox societies in Boston advised a parishioner by no means to read "Ecce Homo." And the pastor of another orthodox society in Boston recommended a parishioner by all means to read "Ecce Homo."
The followers of the "High Church" [illegible] the opinion that the author is an infidel, while those of the Broad Church think "no one could be more profoundly penetrated with the great contrast between holiness and evil."

ROBA DI ROMA.
By WILLIAM W. STORY. 2 vols. 12mo., cloth, $5.
The title, "Roba di Roma," will be intelligible to every one who has been in Rome. Mr. Millhouse, in his dictionary, defines "Roba" to be "goods, wares, things, articles, property, chattels, estate, stuff, lumber, a robe, gown, dress." Yet this definition, as exclusive as it is, is inadequate. We have no term so comprehensive in English. "Roba" is everything from rubbish and riffraff to the most exquisite product of art and nature. This book is filled with "Roba," and I hope that it contains very little "Robaccia," which Mr. Millhouse defines to be "trash, trumpery, and stuff."—[From Preface.

HIDDEN DEPTHS.
1 vol. 12mo., $1 75.
"This book is not a work of fiction in the ordinary acceptation of the term. If it were, it would be worse than useless, for the 'Hidden Depths' of which it reveals a glimpse are no fit subjects for a romance."—[Preface.
