

20,000 ANGORA GOATS.

Charles S. Onderdonk, of Lamy, N. M., has settled in Denver in a beautiful new home, to enjoy his annual income of many thousands. This income is derived from goats.

There is no time of the year when he has not on his immense ranch at least 10,000 goats. Often, prior to the periodical shipments, he has as many as 20,000. There are 28,000 acres of ground for them to graze over, and they are such frugal little beasts that they can pick up livings where other animals would starve. They eat the foliage of low trees when the grass is scanty, even strip off the bark sometimes, and readily fatten on such food.

The ranch is just the sort that the youngest kid intuitively longs for. It covers a large part of Glorieta mountain, a great elevation east of Santa Fe. It also contains Apache canon, with its precipitous sides and rocky ledges, along which the intrepid quadrupeds skip and climb in break-neck fashion, and it is great fun for them, for nothing tickles a goat so much as risking his neck, and on the Onderdonk farm he can take chances every hour in the day.

Mr. Onderdonk raises two kinds of goats—Angoras, for their hair, and "Corientes," for their skins.

The hair, which grows luxuriantly on the Angoras, is used in many ways; especially is it valuable in the manufacture of mohair goods. The meat of the goat is little eaten by Americans, but the Mexicans who inhabit the country around the Onderdonk ranch are fond of it, and nearly all of it is sold to them, or exchanged for labor on the ranch.

GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller says that friendship is greater than money. A man who never can tell within ten to fifteen million dollars of how much he is worth ought to be a good judge of money values, and a man who has piled up such a mass of money must also have done it largely through the aid of strong friendships.

A large share of so-called successful people act as if they thought money was the greatest thing in the universe.

We think the ability to deal justly, to be kind under all circumstances and to be cheerful are the greatest, most enduring blessings with the grasp of humanity.—Ashleigh C. Halliwell, editor Livestock World.

Come, commence today today's work—commence where you are, with today's ability and today's light. Don't stop to pity those below, nor to growl at those above, but climb, climb, climb. Do your level best in the light of the unity of all things, all persons, all efforts, in the light of the distinction of each, but the separation of none, and you have done your best for both those below and those above you. Work today, remembering that as you gave, so shall it be given to you again.

Mr. E. Van Alstine, in a recent issue of the Jersey Advocate, draws a number of deductions from the records of the Pan-American model dairy. Among which, in substance, are the following: The best cows are not all in any one breed. The Channel Islands cattle are certainly the ones to be selected for butter production. For milk production, without regard to fat content, the Holsteins are to be selected, especially if the food supply is plentiful and easily obtained. Size alone is no criterion of the value of a dairy cow. An excessive grain ration was not always the most economical. Bran, 6 pounds, and "gluten" (containing 28 per cent. of protein), 4 pounds, as a basis for the grain ration gave the best results. Corn silage was shown to be an economical feed in summer as well as in winter.

Postmaster General Payne has received a letter from a resident of a little town in the state of Washington, complaining that the postmaster there is trying to make a profit for himself out of the sale of postal cards. The letter follows:

"To the General Postmaster, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir: Our postmaster told me that he loose money to sell postal cards at 1 cent each. He sold me nine for 10 cents. I never paid more than 1 sent before. Please let me know if he has a right to charge more. I thank you ahead. Lars Olsen."—Washington Dispatch.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE State of Washington for King County. Spokane Grain Company, Plaintiff, vs. J. A. Pillings, Defendant.

Let your chickens and hogs sleep at night on a board, roost, clean floor, or straw bedding, sprinkled or painted with Lee's Lice Killer. Next morning you will find all body-lice lying dead on the painted floor. Lee's Lice Killer is a liquid lice and mite-killing paint which kills not only all insects that it touches but also forms a gas which penetrates the feathers of fowls and bristles of hogs, killing all insects on their bodies. It is the easiest to use, least expensive, strongest, safest, and best—sure death to all insects. Sold at all important towns. Send for catalogue of poultry and stock supplies and name of nearest agent. Lee's Lice Killer is never sold in bulk. See that every can bears above trade-mark with our name and address.
