"A LOUISA ROMANCE"

Out under the apple trees away from the humdrum of this selfish world, sat a young couple oblivion to everything except one another and the monotonous song of the bees as they wandered from blossom to blossom, like gossiping neighbors hunting an audience. Mables nut-brown hair was confidingly pillowed on Gerome's false shirt bosom, and ever and anon she could hear, what she immagined the passionate beat of his heart, but it was only the tick of his three dollar waterbury.

Stray rays of sunshine fluttered down through the bright green apple leaves and fell tenderly on the velvety lawn. One little sun beam caresses lovingly her swan-like neck and reveals to him the fact that she pays twenty-five cents a box for her complexion.

The man was the first to speak, bending down and looking deep into her lovely dreamy eyes he murmered in a mellow voice (almost mellow enough to lick) my darling I cannot face this cold charitable world alone, without you life would be as lonesom as a Louisa church house on prayer meeting night. The girl raised her face to his and as her warm breath faned his fevored cheek he knew she had onions for dinner, her tongue refused to move, Gerome could plainly tell of the terrible struggle that was taking place in this girls heart, with a mighty effort she choked back what he thoughta sob, it was not a sob it was only her tolu came very near dropping into her asophegas. Not a sound escaped from her ashen lips. The little blush that had nestled under her fifty-cent bangs fled to realms unknown. There was an anxious fear-haunted expression in her tearful eyes that he could not fathom until he saw that she had left her false hair on his shoulder. * * * * * * they are married now he says:

"Pass the butter gentle Mable,
Lightly shove it through the air
In the corner of the dish love
You will find a nut-brown hair.

What fond memories it awakens
Of the days ere we were wed
When upon my good coat collar
Oft was laid your little head

There I found those lovely tresses
In the happy days gone by
Now I strike them every meal time
In the butter or the pie."

M. S. B.

Mr. Tilden Doing Well.

[From the Baltimore Sun]

Having never married, Mr. Tilden lives at "Greystone" the most of his time, his companion being ex-Comptroller Green, who resides with him. Mr. Tilden's house is constructed of gray stone his park is laid out in beautiful drives and walk and is free to the public. Mr. Tilden himself is rarely seen by visitors, being guarded in his immense mansion by his ever-watched secretaries and Mr. Green, his business manager

A day or so ago I went to see the "Sage of Greystone" and to my surprise Mr. Tilden himself opened the door to answer my timid ring. In spite of all that is said about the failure of his health which is not all true Mr. Tilden carries the weight of his seventy-one years uncommonly well. He has not a very vigorous physique, and his spare form is now slightly bent, and his thin hair is whitened with the frosts of many winters. His eyes droop a a little, and whatever may be the cause, he is unable to use his right arm and hand at the table or in dressing. It is said he has had a stroke of paralysis which has been succeeded by a sort of palsy, so that his right hand is never in repose, but trembles constantly. In ordinary conversation Mr. Tilden's voice is low, sinking at time almost to a whisper. That he is just as bright and quick-witted as ever I have no doubt. He walks slowly and with difficulty, due to partial paralysis. At home he is hospitable and kindly. His collection of engravings is marvellous. Some of his treasures are invaluable. His autograph copies are numerous and the man who could be bored or ennuied if left for hours alone in Mr. Tilden's library would be just the sort of a man that I should imagine would go to a masquerade dressed in a baby's frock.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

It is reported that the President will arrive in Washington before the tenth of September, this is earlier than he was expected, but it is quite probable that he is now resigned to forego the hardships of a fishing camp for the luxuries of the Executive Mansion, and the ear-piercing music of the mosquito, for that of the Marine Band.

'There will be a big cleaning out soon after the President returns,' said an official in the Treasury Department yesterday. The committees that are examining things here will recommend many dismissals. There is a great deal of dead timber that will be cleaned out. The notion of this Administration is that things should be run in a simple and economical way, and that no more people should be employed than are necessary to do the work.

One of the officers of the United States Senate who is in town at present, probably because it is pay-day or something of that sort, is of the opinion that when Congress meets in December there will be such a shaking up of the pay-rolls and so much retrenchment generally that the attaches of that luxurious bed will be greatly surprised. More than this, many of them will be compelled to walk. During the closing hours of the last Congress the usual flood of resolutions authorizing the appointment of all sorts of committees for junketing trips during the summer, with an un-limited right to draw on the fund, were introduced. Some of them, whose promoters were sharp enough to get them in early, were passed. But before many days the pressure was so great that the whole thing was turned into a farce. The debate which sprang up over the various resolutions of the dignified Senators who were making frantic efforts to put some protege on the pay-rolls for the summer with nothing to do was ludicrous to the United States Senate. Some of the cooler headed Senators (whose clerks were already provided for) were smart enough to see it. They called a caucus and after two or three angry meetings smothered the resolutions. They went even farther. They appointed a Committee whose duty it should be to hold meetings during the summer and go over the whole ground in relation to sinecures about the chamber with a view of making a report in the fall, which would bring about a great many reforms, and much retrenchment all around. This Committee has been hard at work all summer and its report will be made the basis of a little retrenchment and reform side show in imitation of that which the Administration is carrying on upon such a large and thorough scale. It will also furnish Republican Senators a needed opportunity to worship these species of reform most eloquently with their lips, to put themselves on record, and to roar through the Congressional Record that they are the first, sole and original inventors of Civil Service reform, that they have a broad patent on political virtue, and that the reform of the present Administration is but a spurious imitation and infringement.

In political circles here the Democrats are highly pleased at the course of the Republicans of Ohio and Iowa in "falling back upon the bloody shirt" for a political issue. The Democrats do not believe that the masses in the north can be stired again by sectional appeals. An Ohio Democrat said to day:—"If the Ohio canvass is fought out in accordance with Senator Sherman's keynote it will disgust many members of that party so that they will stay away from the polls. Sectionalism was burried in General Grants grave. Why, at the recent grand army re-union ex-confederates were present by special invitation. The people of Ohio consider the war over, and if the Republicans make their fight on old war issues we will beat them certain." Other Democrats talk in the same strain. They do not conceal their gratification at what they consider a blunder on the part of the Republican leaders of Ohio and Iowa.

A SONG OF GRATITUDE.

In olden times, Bethesda's pool
Was famed for healing all diseases
Once plunged beneath its waters cool,
Each evil, stain and sickness ceases.

In modern days we find a cure,
Of worth as rare, as much deserving;
A remedy safe, quick and sure,
Dr. Richmond's SAMARITAN NERVINE.

For Epilepsy, Spasms, Colics Cramps,
Coughs, Colds, or any kind of Phthysic:
Its merits as a leader stamps,
It far above all other physic.

It goes at once right to the spot
Where lurks the danger, nev'r swerving
In all the world perhaps ther's not
A cure like Dr. Richmond's NERVINE.

As in the blood diseases lie;
Each artery, each vein, each curve in;
There's nothing makes ill humor fly,
Like the Samaritan Nervine.

For old or young, for rich or poor,
Whatever class of life you serve in,
To health wide open is the door,
From the Samaritan Nervine.

Then do you value health and strength,
And think the blessings worth preserving.
Better than all Golconda's wealth,
Is Dr. Richmond's SAMARITAN NERVINE.
