HONEY! THE BEST OF HONEY!!

I HAVE a valuable receipt for making Honey which I will send to any person upon the receipt of 50 cents. We make and use it in our family at half the cost, and consider it as good as the best article of genuine bee made honey, from which it cannot be told. Any person who will make and sell it can clear from two to three dollars per day; it only requires four articles to make it and they can be had at any store for fifty cents. Every family may have this delightful luxury, for any lady can make it in fifteen minutes at any time.

If you really want something nice do not miss the Honey or Washington Receipts for they are positively all I claim for them and they should be in every family.

Three cents postage stamps are as good as money.

WHY LABOR SO HARD WHEN WASHING.

I HAVE a chemical process for cleaning clothing, by the use of which the clothes can be washed very clean without boiling and with very little rubbing.

By this method, much hard labor may be avoided the washing is done in half the time, and the clothes last much longer, for they are not worn out by rubbing, as in the old way of washing by machines, &c. The articles used cost but little, and are easy to obtain. I mail the receipt to order, postage paid upon receipt of 50 cents. Three cents postage stamps good as money.

CONFEDERATE ARMORY and FOUNDRY COMPANY.

TO THE CITIZENS OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA.

WE ARE ON THE EVE of what may prove a long and bloody war. The best citizens of our country are to be opposed in battle by the hireling hordes of the north. The victory is generally with those who are best drilled, and armed with the most approved weapons. Our enemies have all the means at hand for constructing the most destructive weapons of war. Our country in this respect is almost destitute. Our supplies from foreign countries have been cut off. The present stores must be soon exhausted. It is absolutely necessary, therefore, to provide, at an early day, against all contingencies. All preliminary preparations have been made to commence immediately on a large scale, the manufacture of all implements and munitions of war that we may need. Southern talents stands ready to labor in the cause of Southern freedom. Our government will look to private enterprise to supply its wants. Those who have gone forth to fight the battles of their country, demand of us that they should not be left without the most improved means of defence against their enemies. Our best interests call on us for the immediate commencement of this important work. Capital is now wanted, and we confidently appeal to the patriotic feelings of the people of the Confederate States to aid us in carrying out this enterprise. As an investment, there is no better opportunity at present offering. THOMAS E. McNEILL, Acting Sup'dent,

CHARLES BYRNE,

No. 46 Tchoupitoulas Street, between Poydras and Gravier, New Orleans,

MANUFACTURER OF

COPPER, SHEET IRON, TINWARE, Etc.,

Dealer in Stoves and Stove Pipe.

MAKES every description of Copper work, including Stills, of from 20 to 2000 gallons, and Sheet Iron work and Tinware, etc.; Blacksmithing and general Jobbing and Repairing in the metallic line attended to. He keep a good assortment of TINWARE on hand, which is offered at very low prices, both by wholesale and retail.

Charles Byrne would also state that he keeps constantly as good a supply and assortment of the best description of both Heating and Cooking Stove as can be found elsewhere, one description of which, ANTHRAY OR HIS OWN MANUFACTURE, the BYRNE STOVE, would cook for from 80 persons to 200, or even up to 300 or 400, according to size, there being seven sizes.

This description of stove is extraordinary for simplicity, strength, compactness and convenience of being moved from place to place without liability to injure, also for durability. No Stove can excel it for baking, frying, boiling or broiling; its capacious oven has an apparatus, easily managed, and not liable to get out of order, that when properly used, causes meat of all descriptions, as well as fish, vegetables, fruit, pastry and bread, etc., which may be put on it, at the same time, to be baked, or more properly speaking roasted, in the best possible manner, and to be dry and crisped on the surface, as if cooked before an open fire, and each article retaining its own particular flavor, all the damp sweat and fumes arising from the different articles undergoing the process of cooking, being carried entirely off the moment they arise. It can also be made to have the power to consume nearly all its own smoke; it has besides a draft regulator to govern the fire. "The Byrne Stove" will either suit for wood or coal, and besides has the advantage of admitting of another stove being attached, or hitched on to it, which can be done with very little trouble, and without any alteration or change in its form or construction. When put together, the two form a splendid Range and are worked with only one fire, that of the first. The additional stove serving in conjunction with the first to do all description of baking, as well as for heating purposes, etc.

The furnace or lower body being lined all round with heavy superior cast iron guard plates, and seperate heavy grate bars, should they get warped or burned from the constant action of the fire, can all or any of them be renewed by the maker (who retains all the original patterns,) at very trifling expense, which will render the stove as good as new. These guard plates have very seldom to be renewed before the expiration of two years, and from that up to three or four years, and the sheet iron part, if the foregoing is attended to, will easily last from eight to ten years. This stove is now in use on steamships, steamboats, in hotels, boarding houses and on many plantations, and the strongest testimonials are to be looked for, and in several private families.

C. B. offers the above and all his other greatly famed excellent heating and cooking stoves, and other articles to the public, at reasonable prices.

NOTE.—C. B. would respectfully ask a share of the patronage of the people of the south, who, both in the country and in the city, almost invariably send very large sums to the NORTH OF MASON AND DIXON'S LINE, for metallic articles and other manufactures, which generally speaking leaves our workshops, foundries, etc., IN A VERY LANGUISHING CONDITION, when a reasonable share of their patronage would create an ability with Southern manufacturers to furnish and supply all that the south requires and leave us so far independent of the north.

Aline Norton.

It was a bright and cloudless evening, and the full moon was shedding a radiant light, over the quiet village of Norton. In the suburbs and almost on the main road leading through the village, stood a quaint old house in the form of an L. The old house with its broad porches, high narrow windows, and six gable chimneys, was almost concealed by the tall locust-trees, interspersed with crape myrtle, roses and the many luxuriant vines peculiar to the south. Here amid the thick clustering foliage of the old trees and shrubs, the golden oriole and mocking-bird had reared undisturbed their young, and sang their wildest, sweetest notes. But not more wild and sweet was the song of the birds which warbled in the old home trees, than the voice of Aline Norton—the Belle, the pet, and pride of the village. Her father was one of the pioneer settlers, and had held an office of high trust almost as far back as the memory of the oldest settlers. Here he had wedded Aline's mother, a beautiful and accomplished lady, who died a few days after Aline's birth, leaving her to the care of a pious aunt and a doating step-sister. Here in the old house, shielded from all that could war, or in any way make life unhappy had grown to womanhood, Aline Norton. Fond caresses of neighbors and friends, books, music, and presents of every description had been lavished on her without an sparing hand. Men of talent, wealth and honor, had paid her homage, and sought to win her hand. But to all she turned away to seek a new admirer, and thus she had attained her twenty-first birth day, when Julian Willis, a young planter in the vicinity of Norton, returned from college to take possession of his property. Of a temperment gay and courteous, and a mind highly cultivated and richly stored with learning, he soon found in the society of Aline Norton the pleasure which he had feared he should not find in the isolated vicinity of Norton.

Three years previous to the evening on which my story commences had passed away, and yet Julian Willis had made no formal declaration of love to Aline Norton. Yet no one doubted his fidelity to her. Nor did any one make the slightest allusion to either Alice or Julian on the subject, which both seemed resolved to make a mystery to all but themselves.

A cloud of dust rose thickly about a horseman who came galloping down the main road to Norton. A sleek, black setter dog, to which he whistled occasionally, bounded friskily by the side of the panting horse. Suddenly the sound of a harp, accompanied by a rich, strong voice, caught his ear. "Woa, Phillip, woa," said he to young man, suddenly reining up the panting animal. "Down, Soto, down!" exclaimed he as he saw the beautiful black setter about to bound away in the direction of the house before which he had halted. Just at that moment the he
