LITERARY NOTES.

A new story of Arctic adventure, by Chas. W. Hall, "Adrift in the Ice-fields," will be published by Lee & Shepard.

The British Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge has in press a Manual on the Personal Care of Health—a curious acknowledgment of the connection between "health and religion."

A curious memorial of the late war is announced by a publishing house in Richmond Va., a facsimile, with all the signatures, of "The ordinance of Virginia to repeal the ratification of the Constitution of the United States and State of Virginia," as passed by the Virginia Convention, April, 1861.

The Yale alumni propose to make a full collection of works issued by the officers and alumni of Yale, to form part of the American educational department at the Exposition, and finally of the Yale Library in an "Alumni Alcove." Such publications should be sent at once to B. G. Northrop, New-Haven.

Life insurance is calling forth a special literature of some importance. The latest announcement is of a "Life Assurer's Handbook," to be published in London. The preface will be an essay surveying modern life assurance. The editor, Mr. Clifford, calls especial attention to the silent social revolution going on in large centers of population abroad, by means of small industrial assurances among workingmen, and, proceeding a step further, puts in a plea for compulsory life assurance for small amounts among the employes in great mercantile establishments.

Among the collection of old plays presented to the British Museum by Mr. Coventry Patmore, which formerly belonged to R. Brinsley Sheridan, has been found, says The Athenæum, the holograph original of the comedy "The Trip to Bath," written in 1749 by Mrs. Frances Sheridan, his mother, and which, it is said in Moore's "Life of Sheridan," was the source of his play of "The Rivals." A very slight comparison of the two plays leaves no doubt whatever of the fact, and in the character of Mrs. Malaprop Sheridan has actually borrowed some of her amusing blunders from the original Mrs. Tryfort without any alteration whatever.
