MR. R. W. ELLIOTT, of the St. Charles Arcade Restaurant begs leave to assure his friends and the public, that his establishment continues open for the reception of visiters, for whose gratification and comfort he has spared no pains to obtain, at all times, the choicest and most varied supplies of the market. His wine cellar is well stocked with the finest wines of Germany, France, Madeira, &c. &c. As to the preparation of his bill of fare, he refers gentlemen who have before favored him with their presence, to their past experience, and to strangers he would merely extend a kind invitation to come and taste for themselves, in the full assurance he and they shall become intimate friends. While thus setting forth his claims as a Restaurat keeper, he would suggest that he is prepared to accommodate a number of regular boarders and lodgers. His rooms are comfortable and convenient. As prices, he refers to his bill of fare for an exposition of this important part of his creed, in the belief that its provisions will be cheerfully subscribed to by his customers, as quite reasonable for this latitude.
