General Joffre Giving an Order on Battlefield.

This is one of the rarest photographs taken in the war. It shows General Joffre, commander in chief of the French, giving an order on an actual battlefield. General Joffre does not often pose for photographs and he did not in this case. The photographer here got near him and at an opportune moment snapped him.

Good Stage Jokes.
In the May American Magazine Walter Prichard Eaton, dramatic critic of that publication, writes an interesting article, in the course of which he tells the following stories:

"There is a form of stage humor which has always been popular in America, and perhaps is an expression of a national trait. It consists of the joke which is made by the actor on the stage half as a part of the play, half out of the play as a sort of side remark to the audience, as it were burlesquing the play. It is a favorite form of humor with certain vaudeville comedians, who usually abuse it. It was a favorite form with the old Weber and Fields company, who could use it to perfection. Once the late Peter Dailley, in a Weber and Fields play, came out on the stage from the wings, pursued by the applause supposedly of a group of diners to whom he had been making a speech. He jerked his thumb toward the invisible applauders, smiled at the audience, and remarked, 'Jolly dogs, those stage hands.'

"Again DeWolf Hopper started to make a certain speech after the first performance of 'Fiddle-dee-dee,' and hesitate for a word.

"'What's the matter?' asked Warfield. 'You did it all right this afternoon.'

"An audience which had howled with laughter all the evening broke out anew at this kind, which refuse to take the play seriously and which include the whole audience in the fun, certainly make for a kind of family intimacy in the playhouse; and if the players are comic and skillful, if the public is keen witted, and if the play itself has merits, a brand of entertainment results which is peculiarly palatable to us Americans. Of course, the trouble is that so few players can do this sort of jesting, can become thus intimate with an audience, without becoming obnoxious. Therefore, since the little, smoke-filled, much-beloved Weberfield Music Hall closed its doors we have had no company in New York, nor in America anywhere, to take the place of that institution which for so many years was the delight of us all."

Your Children Won't Have Good Manners if You, Yourself, Haven't.

In the course of a very interesting little article entitled, "Your Children's Manners," in the May Woman's Home Companion appears the following wise comment:

"Good company manners depend upon good home manners. As for table manners, the active child who from his earliest years has been accustomed to regular meals of simple food with sufficient variety for his health and pleasure will be hungry enough at mealtime to eat anything that is put before him. If from the beginning he has been encouraged by example, then good table manners will be as natural as breathing. They will be a part of him, and he will make use of them wherever he is.

"The place for a parent to begin training the manners of her child is with her own manners. Whenever a mother complains to me of the bad manners of her child she is unconsciously lodging a complaint against herself as a mother. Of course a certain amount of boisterousness and willfulness is to be expected, and hoped for, in the child; but bad manners spring almost invariably from the carelessness, lack of consideration, artificial ideals, lack of time—many busy mothers, it is true, can not give the time they wish to their children—of those who are responsible for the child's training.

"The old ideal of training in behavior was based largely upon the principle of the child's consideration for his elders; the modern principle demands also the elders' consideration for the child."

Wild Animals Trust This Man.

In the interesting people department of the May American Magazine appears an article about Sol A. Stephan, who is doing a splendid work at the Cincinnati zoological garden. He knows how to perform a surgical operation on a tiger, cure a hippopotamus and take care of all kinds of wild animals. His work requires a rare kind of wisdom and ability. Following is an extract from the article about him:

"For 35 years Sol Stephan has provided over the Cincinnati zoological garden, and has been, therefore, foster father to every sort of wild animal which has ever been seen in a zoo on this continent.

"Stand beside the cage of a fierce and monstrous lion suffering with an ingrowing claw, an abscess or a decayed tooth. Could you suggest a safe and effective method of operating? Sol builds a false back for the cage, ten men pull it forward with ropes, it constricts the lion until he can not stir, and the trick is accomplished.

"Could you extend the life of the last passenger pigeon in a world from a normal period of about eight years to an actual life of 29 years and seven months? Sol Stephan did it; and he is now caring for a pair of European storks which have been his charges for over 19 years, and for three Carolina parakeets, the last survivors of their race in the world, each of which is over 30 years of age, and one of which is completely bald, so long has she lived beyond her allotted span of summers.

"Colonel Stephen raises every year several young lions, tigers, leopards, buffalo, camels, llamas, kangaroos, and hundreds of the young of smaller beasts, birds and reptiles; but the proudest moments of his life are when he gazes at the flower of the Cincinnati zoo, the marvellously perfect young giraffe Daisy, which he raised from birth. You can count on the fingers of one hand all the giraffe infants which the zoos of this continent have ever seen, and none but Daisy has lived more than a fortnight after birth. Daisy is now four years old and the admiration of every wild animal lover."

Appalling Fire Risks on Farms.

A contributor to the current issue of Farm and Fireside shows how appalling fire risks are on farms. He tells how to reduce some of these fire risks and writes in parts as follows:

"The inveterate smoker is about as dangerous as a walking stick of dynamite. It makes me shudder to see a man smoking around the farm building. One man I know never will forget the way he was run off the farm when I caught him smoking a cigarette while stacking hay. Another dangerous practice of which the average man is guilty is that of carrying ordinary matches loose in his pockets. He should carry either safety matches or keep the ordinary kind in a metal box.

"On most farms the lantern is still the usual light for working about the buildings after dark. A good way to keep it clean and safe is, first, to take out the burners and clean them by boiling in strong soapuds. This will keep the ventilating passages of the burner working properly. Then wipe all leaking or spilled oil off the base.

"String a wire along behind the horses and cows high enough so that no switching tails or a man's head will strike a lantern hung to it.

"Put a few short-sliding hooks on this wire so the lantern can be hung to throw light wherever needed.

"Never set a lantern down; either hold it or hang it up. Then when it is accidentally struck it will swing instead of upsetting."

COURT OF SESSIONS GETS DOWN TO WORK

CURRAN ALEXANDER, ALLEGED UXORICIDE, ARRAIGNED LATE YESTERDAY

PLEAS OF GUILTY

Entered by Several Defendants— Sentences Ranging From 7 Years Down Imposed.

With the arraignment of Curran Alexander, the Pelzer mill operative who has been in the county jail here since last winter, on charges of having murdered his wife, the first day of the summer term of the court of general sessions for Anderson county, which was convened at 10 o'clock with Judge Thos. S. Sease, of Spartanburg presiding, came to a close yesterday afternoon at 5:40 o'clock. With the exception of the above case, there were no matters of extraordinary interest taken up the first day. Four cases were disposed of by jury trial, while defendants in four cases came forward an entered pleas of guilty. The grand jury recessed about the same time as the court, without having completed its work.

Alexander Case.
Curran Alexander, it will be recalled, is the man who, it is alleged, became infatuated with his wife on February 14 last at their home in the Pelzer Mill village, and attacked her with a razor, almost severing her head from her body. He then turned the weapon upon himself, it is stated, and came dangerously near severing his own throat. For several weeks the man lay in the county jail here in a precarious condition.

When brought before the court Alexander stated that he had not secured a lawyer, whereupon Judge Sease appointed A. H. Dagnall, Esq., and Sam'l L. Prince to represent the defendant, Counsel for the accused man announced that they would ask the three days allowed by law to defendant between his arraignment and trial. The matter of setting a definite date for the calling of the case was taken up, but the solicitor stated that he was not in a position to do this. He stated, however, that the case would not be called for trial before Thursday.

Other Cases Finished.
Robert Bowie was found guilty by a jury of charges of assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature, he having been indicted for assault and battery with intent to kill. Sentence was not passed in this case.

Indicted for burglary, Remus Harris and Ester Morris were found guilty by a jury, with a recommendation to mercy. They were sentenced to serve 5 years each in the penitentiary or on the public works of the county.

Cooley Groves pleaded guilty to an indictment for assault and battery with intent to kill and was sentenced to serve 8 months on the county chain gang.

Grady Evans pleaded guilty to an indictment for housebreaking and was sentenced to serve one year on the chain gang.

Flanders Santer entered a plea of guilty to an indictment for larceny and was sentenced to serve 16 months on the chain gang.

Lee Robinson, indicted for murder, entered a plea of guilty to manslaughter, and was sentenced to serve 7 years in the penitentiary or on the public works of the county.

Bills Returned.
The following true bills were returned by the grand jury:

Robert Bowie, assault and battery with intent to kill (two cases.)

Curran Alexander, murder.

Mamie Williams and Mamie Kay, housebreaking and larceny.

Remus Harris and Ester Morris, burglary and larceny.

Flanders Santer, larceny.

Lee Robinson, murder.

Cooley Groves, assault and battery with intent to kill and carrying concealed weapons.

Floyd Ellison, violation dispensary law.

Clyde Devlin, assault and battery with intent to kill.

Frank E. Tinsley, assault and battery with intent to kill.

One No-Bill.
But one no-bill was returned by the grand jury, that being in the case of Paul Jones, charged with housebreaking and larceny.

Do You Carry Fire Insurance?

The business man protects himself against the loss of his factory by means of fire insurance. For reasons much more imperative he should insure his family against the loss of his producing power by life insurance. The factory may never burn, but the man will die. Though the factory should burn uninsured, the owner might live to accumulate property worth many times its value. But if the man dies uninsured his family suffers an absolute and irreparable loss. Only through life insurance can this consequence be avoided. Life insurance does not insure life, but it does insure the productive value of a life, and it affords the only means possible for the vast majority of men to continue an adequate provision for their families after they themselves are dead. This is not only possible, but it is a duty. The law requires a man to provide for his wife and children, and the highest sentiments of noble manhood demand that he should also make provision for his widow and orphans.
