LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

GATHER LATE—Clerks' Picnic and Ball.—By an unforeseen accident we failed to acknowledge the presentation of complimentary tickets for the Clerk's Benevolent Association, for the picnic and ball, afternoon and evening of Independence Day, on the Fair Grounds. The committee of arrangements consists of such excellent gentlemen as Messrs. O. S. Babcock, J. A. Ottmann, George E. Paisant; invitation, Messrs. S. C. Brodowski, D. H. Buckley, John Patin, John Smith; judges of races, Messrs. T. McCloskey and Charles Leighton. The programme is made up of varied attractions, not to mention the one hundred line prizes, which the holder of a ticket may, can or will draw. These fine prizes are on exhibition at No. 3 St. Charles street. All fond of fireworks displays will be highly gratified by a glorious exhibition. Another excellent feature, and one which will find great favor with heads of families, is that no ladies will be permitted to enter the grounds without a ticket of invitation. If other associations would adopt this plan, the Fair Grounds would improve in its moral standing. The picnic will take place on the glorious fourth, and the dancing will commence at four o'clock in the evening. Read one of the programmes, which furnishes full particulars.

BRIEF MENTION.—J. J. McCort, for having been caught in the act of robbing the dwelling of S. F. Pierce, No. 133 Dryades street, goes to the Criminal Court on the foundation that he is a burglar. He was before Judge Abell last week for a similar offense, and was cleared.

Before nine o'clock yesterday morning, quite a number of persons stood waiting at the doors of Administrator Walton's office, eager to pay money into the city treasury for licenses and taxes.

It was pleasant to see that an effort in part, succeeded in cleaning a portion of Poydras street of such incumbrances as greatly incommoded and endangered pedestrians. Had not some authority interfered, the supposition is that the retailers would soon have appropriated the entire banquette. There are other thoroughfares almost as bad, where many dealers seem to regard the sidewalks as their personal property, and perhaps they are right.

John O'Neil would pilfer wood, for which he was arrested on Chippewa street. This is the thirteenth time he is charged with a like offense.

During Tuesday night Christian Deddling, of No. 22 Annunciation street, fell into the river from the Canal street ferry, but was rescued by that energetic oar, Officer Douglas.

Corporal Wolfe rescued Michael Burke from a watery grave, head of Melpomene street.

Lawrence Futtrich was tried in the Criminal Court, charged by J. L. Herwig with burglary and larceny, and acquitted. The case was that in which Mr. P. F. Herwig's residence was robbed of several articles of value, among which was a lottery ticket entitled to a prize. Accused presented the ticket to Mr. Howard's agent for payment, asserting that he had received it from a butcher in Poydras Market, who had found it.

Mr. Brion, in attempting to jump on an open bridge over the old canal at Rampart street, failed to spring a sufficient distance, and, in falling, broke one of his limbs.

Some sweet-toothed burglar tried his hand at breaking into Richelieu's confectionery store. He had effected an entrance, but, for sufficient reasons, he went without being told to.

The fire on Elysian Fields street early yesterday morning was the burning of two stables near Luzenberg Hospital. J. Levantree was the owner.

THE ITALIAN VENDETTA.—Inquest in the Case of the Murder of Salvadore Honoratio—The Coroner's Inquest and Verdict of the Jury—Justifiable Homicide.—George McCaullay, residing at William Long's, on Victory street near Spain, testified that he was working on the Chattanooga Railroad on the tenth of June, between the hours of 7 and 11 A. M.; saw the flash of a pistol, and heard the report; the pistol was in the hands of the deceased; saw he was shooting at Casa Bianca, who was dodging behind a wagon; witness identified the accused at the Parish Prison as Casa Bianca; saw accused rise and return shot of deceased, and knew by the action of the latter that he had been hit; accused went to the Red Store after hitting deceased, and deceased followed him, and finally threw his pistol after him; witness picked up the pistol and gave it to officer Stephout, who took charge of deceased; the pistol was a single barrel deringer.

E. Bendernagle testified that he was working on the Chatanooga Railroad between the hours of seven and eleven o'clock, on the tenth of June; he was opposite the Red Store; this witness verified and indorsed in every particular the evidence of the preceding witness.

Officer F. G. Stephout, of the third precinct police, testified that on Friday, June 10, 1870, just after seven A. M., he heard two shots in the direction of the Red Store, near lower post fourteen; there were a few seconds between the two reports; saw two men with a wagon and horse between them; deceased was in a standing position and the accused in a stooping one; accused was surrounded by smoke; saw deceased throw his pistol at the accused. Corporal Denny ordered me to arrest "that man;" I took deceased in custody, and found his left arm was bleeding profusely; blew a whistle and obtained assistance from Ben Harrison; tied up deceased's arm with my own handkerchief; asked citizens to find the pistol deceased had thrown away; the pistol was found and turned over to me by Mr. McCaullay; the witnessed here described the pistol, which was a one-barreled one, with certain marks; deceased was taken to the stationhouse, and here witness heard that the accused had been arrested; saw accused in the cell, and his face was bloody; deceased was a tall man and the accused a small man.

James Pendergast, coxswain of boat No. 3, of the river police, testified that he landed his boat about seven o'clock, on the tenth of June, at post No. 14; he landed before he heard the two pistol shots fired; went in the direction of the shots, heard a whistle blown, and found Officer Stephont in charge of the accused, whom he had arrested; accused was bleeding from the left arm; followed the accused into a yard, 235 Peters street, (front levee); found Corporal Denny there, standing outside the door; in answer to witness' inquiry, Corporal Denny said: "He is in there, under the bed;" witness went in and took the prisoner out, and was assisted by Corporal Denny; a large clasp-knife was found by the witness under the bed, where accused had hid himself.

Corporal Denny testified to the same facts as the other witnesses, with the additional evidence that he had pursued the accused, and fired one shot at him. He saw the man run into a room, and he blew his whistle, and saw Officer Pendergast go in and take him out.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "We, the jurors, are of the opinion, from the testimony elicited for the State, that the case was one of justifiable homicide."

THE UNNATURAL FATHER.—Ferdinand Bloom, whose horrible conduct toward his daughter, which we related a short time ago, was yesterday examined before Recorder Staes, and the testimony was so very direct that the papers were sent to the Criminal Court under the charge of incest. Anna, the injured child, was plain in her statements; other testimony, also, was quite flat, so that it now appears that Bloom is one of the most depraved wretches that ever came into this community. Although our relation of the affair, when it was first made public, was pretty strong, yet we failed, for obvious reasons, to state all the abominable facts.

BY THE STEAMSHIP LIZZIE.—Passengers by the steamship Lizzie, Captain Felsher, inform us that citizens of Pensacola are frightened at reports that yellow fever is prevalent in New Orleans. The officer in command of the navy yard, adopting this absurd belief, instructed his recruiting officers here to return home immediately, with the men he had enlisted. It is strange that such foolish rumors should gain credence in a city which is in almost daily communication with us. We will not be slow to inform our readers when yellow jack arrives, if he arrives this season, which is not at all probable.

RECORDER WEBER'S COURT.—Philip Kreamer, a youth charged with insult, abuse and threats, furnished bail for his appearance.

Felix Breen, charged with assault and battery, has gone down in default of bail for his appearance.

Henry Dean, charged with assault and wounding, furnished bail for his appearance to answer the charge.

Stephen Raseland has retired to become a useful member of society, under the supervision of Captain Noble, for thirty days. Stephen has lately been in the habit of keeping company with the cat-fish under the levee at night.

Frank Jacob, who had no regard for the tender feelings of Miss Augustine Rag's head, furnished a bond to let her rest in peace for the comieg six months, and deposited $2 50 for the amusement.

James Carmody has gone down in default of payment of $20 fine, and $250 bonds to keep the peace for six months.

WARRANTS FOR ARREST.—Senator Wilcox was assaulted in West Feliciana parish last Sunday, and he has made affidavit before United States Commissioner Weller, which has led or will lead to the issue of warrants for the arrest of A. Weber, Deputy United States Marshal; E. L. Weber, Sheriff; Charles W. Templet, Deputy United States Marshal; A. J. Poursine, clerk for Mrs. Weber, and Francis Voltaire and Laurent Lieutenant, employes of Mrs. Weber. The assault grew out of some remarks made by Senator Wilcox unsomplimentary to Congressman Newsham, Sheriff Weber and others.

BURNING OF A BRITISH SHIP.—The St. Lawrence, Captain Nichols, lying at post thirty, First District, was discoved to be on fire, early yesterday morning, and, notwithstanding efforts were made to save her, she was sunk. She had over two thousand bales of cotton in her hold, also some flour, which will most likely prove a total loss.

DIED IN THE CHARITY HOSPITAL.—Tuesday night, O. W. Austin was sent to the first precinct stationhouse, very sick. He was soon afterward sent to the Charity Hospital, where he died yesterday. He was once clerk of one of the district courts, of quiet disposition, and greatly liked by the few who knew him.

LITTLE GIRL DROWNED.—At seven o'clock last evening a daughter of Mrs. Thompson, while playing on the wharf head of Third street, accidentally fell into the river and was drowned. She was about ten years old. Efforts to find the body were not successful.

FIRE LAST EVENING.—The alarm at about seven o'clock last evening was occasioned by fire being discovered in the broom factory of Root & Handy, corner of Commerce and Girod streets. The damage was slight, and covered by insurance; cause of fire unknown.

THE PISTOL.—Last evening, at about seven o'clock, a difficulty occurred in Mrs. Walsh's groeery, corner of Customhouse and Franklin streets, between Charles Wilson and a man whose name is unknown. Wilson, in attempting to draw his revolver, shot himself in his left thigh. He was sent to his home, No. 22 Franklin street.

BEFORE RECORDER MASICOT.—Mrs. Fannin and daughter were highly indignant when the Eighth Ward census taker visited their premises. Instead of replying to his numerous questions, they gave him an unearthly tongue-lashing, which was more than his quiet disposition could stand, and he therefore caused their arrest on the charge of insult and abuse. Both gave bonds to appear for examination on the charge.

Eliza Lawrence, fair, fat, forty, and red-headed, while peacefully slumbering in Washington Square, was rudely awakened from her dreams by the Metropolitans, and better accommodations afforded her in the lock-up. She was billeted to the Workhouse.

George Gardner found in the premises of A. Lacoste, under suspicions circumstances, was remanded to the Parish Prison.

Three worthies, named respectively John Door, August Monroe and Isaac Williams, were also remanded for future examination to answer the charge of malicious mischief.

TOO FRIENDLY TO BE TRUE.—We find the following in the Louisville Commercial, and publish it that our restaurateurs may be posted, should the young man come this way:

The confidence business is not exhausted in our city. In connection with the bank robbery, the raised check transaction, and other similar operations of late, we were informed Saturday of a confidence man's attempt at victimizing a reporter of the Courier-Journal. The reporter, who is an honest, good looking young man, went into a restaurant Saturday and ordered dinner, seating himself near a stranger, who was dining rather well.

The stranger having finished his dinner, stepped to the cashier and politely said: "My friend there," pointing to the reporter, "will settle my bill," and passed out, leaving a small package on the counter. On the young man asking for his bill, he was surprised to hear that it was $3 50, and remarked that it was rather an exorbitant price for a modest dinner. "But not for your friend's dinner, too," replied the clerk. "Didn't have any friend, sir," said the reporter. "Now, see here, young man," says the clerk, "you can't play that game here; I know your crowd, and have been bit before—so pay up, or I'll have you taken up." The honest young man, thinking he would solve the matter better afterward, reluctantly paid the amount, and was walking away somewhat excitedly when the clerk remarked that his "friend" had left a package on the counter. The reporter thinking he might get even with his unknown friend, took the package away, and still carries it with him, unbroken, awaiting the call of the owner. He is desirous of finding his friend, but is becoming attached to the package and will be loth to give it up. It was very unkind in the stranger, and he should be held up as an example.

Had the reperter been of New Orleans we imagine that there would have been some fun before the restaurateur would have received payment for the stranger's meal.

The Name of Townsend.

Townsend, of Sarsaparilla notoriety, had his day and his gain as the inventor of a medicine that became popular with the great mass of people, whose blood stood in need of purification. He amassed a great fortune by the sale of his sarsaparilla, built a fine mansion on the Fifth avenue, among the nabobs of New York, and, if not regarded as a benefactor of mankind, was widely known as "Sarsaparilla Townsend," the inventor of a medicine that brought him wealth and fame, though both proved to be of an ephemeral nature. He had his day of flourish and excitement. His little field of patent medicine, and all its attendant glories, to strut in. But he has passed away into the dark valley of death, and the proud mansion he reared with so much pride and ostentation has also been swept away to make room for one of more solid beauty—known as the Stewart mansion, the property of A. T. Stewart—a man of but few pretensions other than of a business character. But Townsend is a name that is destined to flourish, though the great sarsaparilla man be defunct. Townsend, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, seems ambitious of adding new glories to the name. He may not, by the inventions of his intellect, amass a large fortune and build marble halls to dwell in; but he may be able to satisfy the literary world of Chicago that he writes pure English and has a great reverence for the truth. If he succeeds in doing this he will have made a reputation at least equal to his namesake of sarsaparilla fame; and when he has done it, will deserve to have fortune smile on him and crown his efforts in the great work of truth accordingly. We are inclined to think his efforts in behalf of Louisiana and the other reconstructed States are patent-medicine—as well as letters patent, and as such deserve to crown their author with wealth and fame, and to assist him in realizing both, we advise him to purchase tickets immediately in the Louisiana State Lottery. His chances for wealth here are even greater than his chances for fame.

The Franking Enormity.

[From the New York Tribune.]

The public is likely to have occasion for recurrence again and again to the list of Senators who voted to continue the franking enormity. We present their names herewith in a form which will be found suggestive. The vote, as shown from the table below, was a curious one, not merely morally and politically, but geographically as well. It offers singular suggestions concerning population and mail transportation expenses, and it is quite significant as to the disposition of men, whose constituents are remote from the capital and remote from the great centers of population, to act with indifference to the popular will.

We are very glad to learn that the absence of Senator Fenton's name from the list of yeas on the vote for the abolition of the franking privilege was solely due to his having paired with an advocate of its retention.

The West Point Colored Cadets.

There seems little doubt that the conduct of some, at least, of the West Point cadets towards their fellow colored beneficiaries, has been anything but gentlemanly, and the denials of the fact may be taken as the honorable expressions, doubtless, of the better sense and superior manliness of the larger portion of the students. The following noble letter from Senator Ames suggests what may be his knowledge on the subject:

UNITED STATES SENATE CHAMBER, Washington, May 30, 1870.

Mr. Michael Howard, West Point, New York:

DEAR SIR—I received your letter informing me of your departure for West Point. I have seen by the papers that you are now there. By the same papers I saw enough to lead me to believe your life there may be made somewhat unpleasant.

I hope you will act the true man. Do not get disheartened at anything which may be said or done to you. You must not forget that, like Mr. Revels in Congress, you are the pioneer at the Military Academy. He was among men who were gentlemen; you are among boys who are proverbially cruel and inconsiderate. Cadets are no worse than other young men at their age; they are very likely to do many rude and unkind things to you. As I said, you must not notice them. Be the man, and look beyond the annoyance of to-day to the future. Remember you are the representative boy of your race.

I have great regard for your father, and would be only too glad to aid you if I could. My friend and classmate, General Upton, is at West Point, or soon will be. See him, show him this letter, and follow any advice he may give you. He is a true, noble man, who will fully appreciate your position, and sympathize with you.

Keep a brave heart and all will be well.

Very truly yours, A. AMES.

The long expected street letter boxes will be here Saturday, and as soon as they are put up in the various parts of the city, the free letter delivery system will be put into practical operation. It will be so nice to drop a letter into any one of a hundred boxes without the annoyance of going to the Post-office for that special purpose. We presume the "mythical Briggs," the father of free delivery will be here shortly to christen his New Orleans bantling.

Shirley Dare says, "I used to think General Logan too good looking to be much of a politician, but when I watch his unhasting, unresting manner from day to day, my foot goes down firm, and I say, 'jolly for Illinois!'"
