It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Thickness. Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, all and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching, and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once. If your nostrils are clogged and your head is ached and you breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Salve at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed mucous membrane.

SIMPLE LESSONS IN SCIENCE

One, at Least, That May Be Learned in the Kitchen—Mistakes Made Cooking Vegetables.

One can learn many simple lessons in science in the kitchen. A loaf baked with only flour, water and salt will be so heavy that it can hardly be cut, but the addition of yeast produces the loaf as we know it. This is explained by the fact that when yeast is employed carbonic acid gas is produced, which gives rise to the sponginess essential in the structure of good bread. And the fact that the action of the yeast also produces alcohol has led to the story of how a baker, learning this fact, condensed the vapors from his oven until he had obtained a small bottle of spirit, which he triumphantly exhibited in his shop window. A neighboring rival deemed it necessary to devise a counterblast, and put up a notice stating that his bread was sold "with all the gin in it." Some methods of cooking vegetables are denounced as "wicked." It is pointed out that the cook in this country chops her beans into small pieces, so that all the flavor and salts run out, leaving only the miserable, tasteless fiber. On the other hand, with beets, she takes care not to break the skin so that the color should not be lost. Similarly other vegetables should be kept whole, as they are in France, and not treated by methods which result in all that is volatile going up the chimney and all that is soluble going down the drains.

VIRTUE IN SHOEMAKERS' WAX

May Be Relied On to Draw Out Poison From Wound and Prevent Deadly Infection.

Have you ever heard of the medicinal qualities of shoemakers' wax? Long before the virtues of antiphothigline and peroxide of hydrogen were extolled as healing and antiseptic agents, shoemakers' wax was relied upon in many an old-fashioned home. A bit of shoemakers' wax heated and applied over a bruise or abrasion will draw out any poison that may have entered the wound and prevent danger of that modern horror, infection, and its dangerous result, blood poison.

Keep a bit of this old-time safeguard in the house, and if somebody steps inadvertently on a rusty carpet tack, or runs a can opener into the fleshy part of the palm, wash out the wound and clap over it a bit of melted shoemakers' wax, binding a clean bandage over. Or, better still, cleanse the abrasion with peroxide if you have it in the house—as everybody should have—and then apply the heated wax. Infection gets in its deadly work before the danger is realized in most cases, and by the time a neglected cut or bruise has begun to look angry and the doctor summoned, he may not be able to prevent a long and annoying case of blood poison, if not an actually dangerous condition.

Treatment of Acute Pneumonia.

The open-air treatment of acute pneumonia is warmly advocated by physicians, who have had much experience with this disease. Persons suffering from pneumonia require an abundant supply of fresh, pure air—the imperfect aeration of the blood demands it. That there are fewer bacteria in the out-of-door air is another indication for the open-air treatment. Air in abundance, in motion, especially in the open, is an essential to the maintenance of health and a powerful aid in restoring health where it has been impaired. The case of acute pneumonia should be kept in the open both by day and by night. The cold out-of-door air lessens the duration of the fever, the patient breathes with less distress; sleeps better, and rarely is a sedative needed. The tongue is cleaner, appetite is better and convalescence is rapid. It is well known that cold is one of the most efficient agencies for the cure of disease, and statistics bear out the view that the open-air treatment of acute pneumonia is a rational procedure.

Pocket Shower Bath.

A Californian has invented a shower bath which a traveler can carry in his pocket. It is a nickel-plated brass tube with a cork, says the Indianapolis News. The tube is bent like a fishhook and one end inserted in the cork through a hole in the center, with a round plate to keep it from slipping. The other end of the tube is fastened to make a narrow slit about half an inch long at the end. This slit causes the water to spray. The other end is fitted to any faucet in a bathtub or washbowl, and the force of the water causes a fine and sufficient spray to spout that gives a refreshing shower bath. The spray is not great or strong, but it is enough to be the means of great refreshment to the tired traveler. The cork is inserted in the faucet and, of course, can be made to fit any size aperture.

The Rich and Royal Man. I am grown expensive and sophisticated. I can no longer live without elegance, but a country man shall be master of my revels. He who knows the most, he who knows the sweetest and richest life in the world, the water, the plants, the animals, and how to use them, is the richest man.
