LITERARY NOTES.

The New English edition of Boswell's Life of Miss Pinkerton's idol, "The Great Lexicographer," is in two volumes. The editor, Alexander Napier, has corrected Croker's plan of mingling the life and "Tour in the Hebrides" in one ill-compacted whole.

Madame von Glümer—formerly Señora Oviedo and the heroine of Mr. Stedman's poem, "The Diamond Wedding"—has written for The Manhattan a sketch of experiences in Mexico.

Mr. H. A. Giles, the British Vice-Consul at Shanghai, has prepared a collection of over one hundred extracts from the works of about sixty of the most famous Chinese authors of all ages. The book will be published by Mr. Quaritch under the title of "Gems of Chinese Literature," and will form an introduction to the general literature of China.

A history of the anti-slavery movement in Maine is to be published in Portland next year.

Those who have read the sheets of Mr. Black's new novel declare that he has shown in it an unsuspected strength; and that he has succeeded marvellously in getting the atmosphere of Shakespeare's time.

An excellent portrait of Mr. Whittier will accompany Mr. Spofford's picturesque article on the poet in the January Harper.

Mr. Longfellow's nursery rhyme about the little girl who had a curl on her forehead has been illustrated by a young lady, and will be brought out as a Christmas juvenile by R. Worthington.

A French translation of some of Mr. Habberton's stories has been published in Paris under the title of "Chez les Yankees."

Robert Browning has gone to Athens.

A correspondent of The Athenæum believes that Shakespeare's old gravestone has not been replaced by a new one, as has been thought. The inscription, he declares, is in the usual seventeenth century style. "It bears the marks of being hurriedly cut, and corrected afterward; the style and corrections would hardly be repeated by a mere copier. There is also an absence of all tradition or memory of any tampering with the gravestone, though we know how the monument was colored and recolored. This, though but negative evidence, tends to show that the gravestone now visible is the original one, and not a mere copy, which is more than can be said of the entries respecting the birth and death of Shakespeare in the parish registers."

A NATIONAL NOVEL.

HIS SOMBRE RIVALS.

BY E. P. ROE.

"'His Sombre Rivals' is really entitled to be considered a National novel. It deals with the stirring events of the Civil War. The description of the battle of Bull Run is the finest piece of descriptive writing we have read for a long time."—Boston Commonwealth.

First edition 25,000 copies. Second edition on the press.

"Mr. E. P. Roe's new novel is a tale of the Civil War, mingled with a remarkable love story. It is full of earnestness and of noble and tender feeling, showing the best side of human nature. The extremes of happiness and of suffering in a strong, loving life are well portrayed, and the spirit of the book is thoroughly pure and elevated."—Boston Advertiser.

A GREAT TREASON. A story of the War of Independence. By Mary A. Hoppus. 12mo, $1.

It is written with unusual grace and spirit, the fortunes of a young English officer and his sister forming the thread by which the various incidents are bound together. The book may well be added to the short list we have for school-room use of good illustrations of the Revolutionary War. Arnold is but one of many figures, though the most thrilling pages of the book could not but be the capture and death of Andre.—[Nation.

THE MOST DELIGHTFUL BOOK ON

is the

"CHRONICLES OF THE SCHONBERG-COTTA FAMILY."

Over 100,000 copies have been sold in this country alone. A cheap edition now ready, price 25 cents.

The author has reproduced the times of the Reformation with such remarkable success that it is difficult to realize that we are not actually hearing Luther and those around him speak. One branch of the Cotta family were Luther's earliest and most intimate friends. The members of this family, whom the author brings in almost living reality before us, record in these pages their daily experiences connected with the Reformation era, and the reader is brought face to face with the great ideas and facts associated with Luther and the men of his time.

1 vol., 12mo, cloth, 550 pages, $1; or 40c, paper covers 25 cents.

WATCHWORDS FOR THE WARFARE OF LIFE.
