COURT RECORD.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 1873.

Supreme Court.

The following opinion was delivered by Justice Taliaferro:

No. 4716. Commissioners of Emigration vs. C. L. Brandt.—The plaintiffs sue the master, owners and consignees of the steamship Saxonia for the penalty of a violation of Revised Statutes, 1722, compelling them to make a report of name, age, nationality, condition, etc., of every passenger. The steamship Saxonia landed 164 alien passengers January 4, 1872, and failed to make the report. The defendant answers that the act is merely directory; that it is unconstitutional; that it conflicts with article 1.4 of the constitution; that it is repugnant to sections eight and ten of article one, constitution of the United States.

The court below decided that the law was inoperative. It did not pass on the money demand of $100 for each passenger. We concur with the judge a quo in the matter of bonds. 14 An. 267. The immigration law is not in conflict with the constitution of the United States. The State law in question is not a regulation of commerce between foreign nations, but a police regulation. A State may make such a provision for the protection of its own citizens. 7 How., 729; 16 Peters, 625; 5 How., 471.

Ordered, that the plaintiff recover from defendants the penalty claimed in the sum of $10,400.

Lozada of Tepic.

We find in the Chicago Journal of the seventeenth the following generous tribute to a great man with a bad name:

General Manuel Lozada, of Mexico, is one of the most remarkable characters that country has yet produced. He is a pure blooded Indian, and for more than twenty years has maintained an independent government of his own in a mountainous range of country situated in the State of Jalisco. His guiding principle is an echo of that of the Know Nothings of the United States, and is comprised in his motto, "Mexicans must rule Mexico," and by Mexicans he means the genuine descendants of the Aztecs. He is half a bandit and half a statesman. For years he carried on a successful contest with Juarez, remaining invincible in his mountain fastnesses, and fully establishing his authority as a dictator. While the remainder of Mexico has been in a continual state of disorder, his little dominion has been a model of tranquillity and order. Life and property are said to be as safe there as in any part of New England. Thieves and murderers are executed without mercy. Gambling is prohibited, and is punished with severe penalties. Liquor laws are in force, and their provisions are stringently carried out. Even the use of profane language is not permitted. All children between the ages of six and twelve years are compelled by law to attend school, and widows and orphans are maintained at public expense. Criminals are required to labor on the public works. Agricultural interests are fostered by wise and thoughtful enactments; and Lozada's ambition is to extend his rule over the whole of Mexico, in which achievement he would receive the sympathy of the advocates of good government everywhere. If his merits have not been exaggerated, Mexico badly needs some such man at the head of her affairs.

A near-sighted Indianapolis woman patched the seat of her husband's pants with a cold buckwheat cake, that the children had left in her work basket last week. The color of the patchwork matched the trowsers, and as the cake was tough, the mistake might never have been discovered, but the old man got caught out in a shower a day or two afterward: the patch began to swell; he felt cold patches on his back, and, thinking it was spinal meningitis that had clutched him, sent for a doctor, who soothed his fears; but he wants a divorce.

"Bummerhaven" is the euphonious pet name bestowed by the Western press upon Dayton, Ohio, on account of its 530 barrooms.

MONETARY.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY REPUBLICAN,
WEDNESDAY EVENING, May 28, 1873.

We have scarcely any change to notice in the money market. The demand for discounts at most of the banks is of fair extent, while at a few there is a slight falling off and all good paper presented is readily done. The offerings on the street are moderate, and the few transactions reported indicate that lenders are reluctant to accept any but first class signatures or good paper with unexceptionable collaterals. The market is quoted for first class paper, with or without collaterals, at 9@10 per cent per annum. At 12@—, and second class at —@18; first class mortgages run at —@16, and second class at 12. Mortgage paper was reported to be in fair request.
