The Nathan Murder.

The statement, recently made by Irving, the New York thief, at San Francisco, that he was one of the party who murdered Nathan, though discredited by the New Yorkers, has reopened the unanswered question, who was the murderer. Dr. J. C. Johnson, No. 81 Henry street, Brooklyn, comes forward with the following remarkable story:

On the morning of the Nathan murder a man drove in a coach to my house. He was a professional gambler, but had begun to associate with professional thieves, with whom he was a great favorite. On entering my office he asked for my services, saying, on my examining a scalp wound: "Oh, Doc, I got this on a lark. One of the boys struck me." After I had dressed the wound he drove away. Between two and three o'clock in the morning a few days later he again called. I expostulated with him on awakening me at such an early hour. He replied: "Doctor, what need you care when you are paid?" He desired me to again dress the wound. When about to go he threw down a one hundred dollar note on the table. I took it up and said: "I have no change." "Who asked you for change? When I want change I will ask you for it." That was the last I saw of him until November 15, 1871. I was asked to visit a patient, but was not told who he was. When I reached the house indicated I recognized the person as the one whose head I had dressed and who had given me the $100 note. He was in bed suffering from inflammation of the lungs.

When he saw me he said: "Doctor, I ain't got much money now, but if you will get me out of this I will pay you."

On one of my visits I was requested to stop all night. I did so; and that night, while talking to me, he said: "Doc, do you remember the day I called on you to have a wound dressed? Well, I had been engaged in a burglary"—and then turning to his wife he said: "Sis, give the doctor my headache stick." She drew from underneath the bed a large bludgeon, saying as she handed it to me, "This is a curling iron. My husband wanted me to look gay, dress fashionably, and wear curls. He got this iron made for me. You see," she said, as I looked at it, "that it is a little rusty." I looked at what seemed to be rust, and found it to be human blood and hair.

When I questioned him about the wound I had dressed he said, "I would not have got it if my pals had not gone back on me, and had been paying attention to their business. We were busy. I was at the safe when I got a blow on the head with a chair, which nearly knocked me senseless. We had to defend ourselves and follow it up."

I felt that he was the principal in the murder, which was then the topic with all people. While he was speaking concerning his funeral, which he desired to be according to the Masonic ritual, as he said that he was a member of a lodge in England, I asked him if he had any friends. "Yes," he replied, "I have some in New Orleans. I telegraphed to them, but I suppose that they were afraid to send a reply."

The fellow was in want and dying. In a second conversation I asked him to make a confession, "for," said I, "I know that you have valuable information which should be made known, that you are dying." He looked at me sternly, and said: "Doctor, it is well for you that I am dying."

On my telling him that Philip Farley was coming over to see him, he seemed greatly annoyed, and said: "Let him come; he will get no information from me."

You remember when Forrester was arrested that girl said that she saw a man strike something against the iron fence. Well, it was not Forrester. This is the something [exhibiting the bludgeon], and the person who had it up his coat sleeve has gone before his God. He died about the first week in December. Before he gasped his last he said: "I never intended to take life, because when life was taken the whole community was aroused, but when only property was taken a few only thought of it."

The doctor refused to disclose the name of his patient. He resided in New York, but had moved to Brooklyn a few months previous to Nathan's murder. He lived in good style. He and his wife were of respectable families. He himself was a fine looking man, well proportioned and handsome.

One of the most beautiful instances of devotion to the Caucasian idea we have ever seen is shown in recent publication in a Western paper. Mrs. Todd, an excellent Bourbon name, calls the world to witness that one year ago, "discovering" the husband she had sworn to love and cherish, and—if she was a good churchwoman—to obey, was "p@t negro," she sacrificed her own private feelings and left him. Thinking, very properly, that such an act of moral heroism should not be permitted to perish and lose its fructifying power in oblivion, she publishes the fact, doing violence to her innate modesty in the interest of ethnology. It was very handsome, but she might have done better if she had thought of imitating Jael or Judith or Herodias' daughter, and taken the crisp scalp of her Canaanitish lord while he slept. What a poor creature must Desdemona seem in eyes like those of Mrs. Todd! On the whole, we are rather inclined to congratulate Todd on his release than madam upon her discovery.—New York Tribune.

Sir John Lubbock states that the Strepsiptera or parasites found on bees and wasps pass through all their transformations in the bodies of these insects. The males and females are very dissimilar; the former are active, minute and short-lived, while the females are bostle-shaped, never leave the body of the insect, and, except that they occasionally thrust the head of the bottle out between the abdominal rings, they appear to be almost motionless.—Scribner's Monthly.

Italy is undoubtedly on the decline. She has actually lost her old position, even in fine arts, at the Vienna Exposition. It has been accorded to France.

River Intelligence.

Packets Leaving To-day.

Cincinnati	H. S. Turner, 5 P. M
St. Louis	John B. Maude, 5 P. M
St. Louis	Mollie Moore, 5 P. M
St. Louis	Crescent City and barges, 5 P. M
Red river	C. H. Durfee, 5 P. M
Red river	Thirteenth Era, 5 P. M
Yazoo river	Big Sunflower, 5 P. M
Baton Rouge	B. L. Hodge, 10 A. M
Lower Coast	Empire, 10 A. M
Lower Coast	E. Benjamin, 10 A. M
Opelousas	Peerless, 5 P. M

Business for yesterday wound up pretty fair, giving us several departures with good trips. Among those which left, particularly noticeable were the Sabine, for Ouachita; Carrie A. Thorn, for Red river; and the "iron age" man, Boardman, was as happy as if he had belonged to the winning boat's crew. The Katie—as usual with her while that quartette of officers, Campbell, Mossop, Libano and Bell manage affairs—had a splendid trip of freight and people, and it was well deserved.

The weather was to some extent unfavorable for shipping. There was one heavy shower, and a few threatening clouds kept owners of dry goods and other combustibles watching for fear a few drops might do some damage to the contents of their packages.

Boats Due.

Belle Rowland, from Red river; Glencoe, from St. Louis; Charles Bodmann, from Cincinnati; Bart Able, from Greenville.

Arrivals.

Crescent City and barges and Mollie Moore, from St. Louis; H. S. Turner, from Cincinnati, and B. L. Hodge, from Baton Rouge.

Boats Leaving To-day.

That magnificent light draft freight and passenger steamer Thirteenth Era, under command of Captain Charles P. Truslow, leaves to-day at 5 P. M., for Shreveport, Jefferson and all other immediate landings on Red river. Mr. Charles W. Drown has charge of the office.

C. H. DURFEE, FOR RED RIVER.—This fast freight and passenger steamer leaves to-day at 5 P. M., under command of Captain Joseph A. Aiken, with Mr. H. W. McChesney in the office.

B. L. HODGE NO. 2, FOR BATON ROUGE.—This regular Wednesday and Saturday packet leaves at 10 A. M., for Baton Rouge and all coast landings, under command of Captain V. B. Baranco. Mr. J. P. McElroy is her chief clerk.

EMPIRE, FOR LOWER COAST.—This complete freight and passenger steamer leaves to-day at 10 A. M., for the lower coast, under command of Captain Jeanfrean.

PEERLESS, FOR OPELOUSAS.—This light draft passenger packet, under command of Captain H. H. Broad, leaves to-day at 5 P. M. for Opelousas. Mr. J. B. Schmidt will be found in the office.

H. S. TURNER, FOR CINCINNATI.—This fast and splendid passenger packet, in command of Captain W. J. Rusk, leaves to-day at 5 P. M. for Cincinnati, Louisville, Cairo and Memphis. Mr. A. D. Croxall has charge of the office.

The Crescent City and barges, of the Mississippi Valley Transportation Company, will leave for St. Louis, Cairo and Memphis to-day at 5 P. M., under command of Captain James Dawson.

MOLLIE MOORE, FOR ST. LOUIS.—This large freight steamer leaves to-day at 5 P. M. for St. Louis, Cairo and Memphis, under command of Captain Dave Haney. Mr. Tom A. Hutchins has charge of the freight department.

JOHN B. MAUDE, FOR ST. LOUIS.—This large and magnificent freight and passenger steamer leaves to-day at 5 P. M., for St. Louis, Cairo and Memphis, under command of Captain John F. Noel, an old and reliable steamboatman. Mr. A. Grissom, a sociable gentleman, has charge of the office.

The Big Sunflower, under command of Commodore Parrisot, is up for the Yazoo and Tallahatchie rivers. Captain Parrisot needs no words of praise from us, as actions speak louder than words. He deserves from our city a bumper every time, for, instead of doing as a great many do, going North or elsewhere, he comes here and spends his money. A look at the Sunflower will prove to any person that no pains or expense has been spared to make her au fait in every respect. The Big Sunflower goes at five o'clock this evening, and we hope to see a good trip of freight and people. Good bye, Captain Parrisot; we are always glad to see you, or our genial friend, W. C. Jones, who so ably represents you. May success attend you both.

From Above.

[From the St. Louis Times, August 31.]

Yesterday was very warm, with the mercury standing at noon on one of the wharfboats in the shade at 99°. The past week has been anything but brisk in the way of shipments, and but two steamers and a tow of barges got away for New Orleans. The decline in the river at this point for the past week has been an average of about two inches per day. The water on the bars from here out to Cairo maintains the same depth—that is six feet. Osceola bar is said to be the most troublesome place between Cairo and Memphis.

At Memphis, Wednesday, the officers and men who are here with the wreck of the George C. Wolff were summoned before the local inspectors, but nothing was elicited during their examination that has not already been made public.

The following Memphis companies held cargo risks on the Belle Vernon: The Memphis City Fire Company, $3500; Hernando, $2000; Mississippi Valley, $3500, and Home, $500.

The Storm No. 3 sunk a barge of salt at Cooper's bar, below Madison, Wednesday. The barge was No. 33, belonged to Val. P. Collins, and was valued at $1500. It may be raised. The salt was destined for Paducah, Kentucky.

The steamer Ruby, sunk at Shreveport, was a small sternwheel steamer, owned in Cincinnati by Captain Brinley, her commander, and others. She was insured in Cincinnati, and valued at $5000. She formerly plied in the Kentucky river trade, and left for the upper Red river trade about six months since.

An adjourned meeting of the commission for the improvement of the Ohio river meets in Louisville October 1.

[From the St. Louis Globe of August 31.]

The Tom Jasper will follow the John Kyle in the Carroll-Baker line. Walter E. Dill and Hark Terrill, Esqs., will do the clerking.

Jesse, Hiram and James McHaffie, three brothers, all hail from Georgetown, Beaver county, Pennsylvania, have all been employed on three unlucky boats, yet they are safe. Jesse was carpenter on the steamer W. B. Carter when she blew up on the Lower Mississippi river; he was blown out of the texas into the river, where he did extraordinary service in the way of saving the lives of some ladies. James was on the ill-fated steamboat Nick Wall, as steward, when she sunk, and now we read of Hiram being on the George C. Wolff, as steward, and rendering good service in the way of saving lives, etc.

The Late (?) Hon. Philetus Sawyer.

[From the Oshkosh, Northwestern, August 23.]

The body of the late Hon. Philetus Sawyer called upon us yesterday afternoon. Indeed the body extended its hand to us in friendly grasp as of yore. It was the first time we ever shook hands with a ghost. But the body was still robust and portly in appearance, and the emaciated and spectral look usually ascribed to supernatural apparitions was entirely wanting. As our vision became accustomed to the sight, we were gradually made to conceive that the smiling face of our worthy representative was actually beaming upon us in the strength and vigor of life. "I still live" was the involuntary ejaculation that arose in our mind. Mr. Sawyer looked slightly fatigued, however, having probably set up all the night before to read his own obituary. Few men live to do the like.

The Chicago Evening Journal, apparently, is not prone to editorial advertising for nothing. This morning's mail brought to Mr. Sawyer an envelope, and within the envelope was a finely printed bill head, and the bill read as follows:

"CHICAGO, August 22, 1873.

"The late Hon. Philetus Sawyer, to Chicago Evening Journal, debtor—

"To one obituary notice—100 lines at $1 per line, $100."

Mr. Sawyer returned answer that he had audited the bill, and the administrators of the estate would doubtless settle it should the estate be found solvent.

Monetary--Commercial.

MONETARY.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY REPUBLICAN, Tuesday Evening, September 2, 1873.

The money market continues firm, with a good demand for discounts at the banks (to meet the usual heavy payments on the fourth), and fair offerings on the street. Nothing has transpired to indicate any variation in rates and we continue to quote: First class paper at 9@10 ⅌ cent ⅌ annum, with or without collaterals; A1 at 12 and second class at —@18; first class mortgage paper still rules at —@10; and second class at 12.

Gold opened at 115½@116, against 116½ at New York, and, after a light business, closed at the opening rates in both markets, after touching 115⅞ at New York. The sales summed up $20,000, embracing $6,000 at 115⅛, and $1000, $4000, $6000 and $3000 at 115⅜.

No sales of silver were reported. American half dollars were still quoted at 100½@—, and Mexican dollars at ¼ ⅌ cent premium in gold for both new and old.

Sterling exchange was without quotable variation, the advance in gold at New York being counteracted by the decline in bills in that market. The only sales reported were £1800 bill of lading at 124⅛, £1200 A1 clear at 124⅜, and £1400 bank for remittance at 125.

No sales of francs were reported.

At the close sterling bills were quoted at 124⅜@124½ for bill of lading and A1 clear, and 125@— for bank, and francs at 4.62½ for private and 4.59¾@4.57½ for bank.

The offerings of domestic exchange were of moderate extent at previous rates. The sales comprised $50,000 private bankers' at 9-32 premium, and $5000 and $15,000 bank at 5-16.

The banks continued to check on New York at ⅜ ⅌ cent premium, and private sight is still quoted at 5-16.

The only sale of stocks reported was 60 shares of Ammonia and Thermo-Specific Propelling Company on Saturday at ⅝@12.

In bonds we reported sales of $1000 gold bearing 7 ⅌ cent bonds at 62½; $1000 at 62½, and $9000 at 62¾. They closed at 62½.

City appropriation certificates continued nominal at 5⅝.

Metropolitan Police warrants were quoted at 72, but no sales were reported.

Graham State warrants were nominal at 47@42. The sales of Clinton State warrants included $1000 at 50, $4000 at 54½, and $4000 at 55. They closed at 50@—, against 55 yesterday.

COMMERCIAL.

TUESDAY EVENING, September 2, 1873.

COTTON—The sales to-day embraced 400 bales, at higher prices for average good ordinary, with no improvement in strict good ordinary and the better grades. We revise our quotations accordingly, and give also the Exchange figures, which are for average lists according with its types, while our present lists proper range of the market for average lists, but with the outside figures for low middling, good ordinary and ordinary given as the outside for strict of those grades:

NEW ORLEANS CLASSIFICATION, ASSIMILATED TO THAT OF LIVERPOOL.

	General quotations.	Exchange quotation.
Inferior	— @—	—
Low ordinary	— @—	—
Ordinary	12½@12½	12½
Strict ordinary	14 @14½	—
Good ordinary	15½@15½	15½
Strict good ordinary	16½@16½	—
Low middling	17½@18	17½
Middling	18½@—	19½
Strict middling	— @—	—
Good middling	— @—	19¾

We have temporarily introduced specific quotations for strict ordinary and strict good ordinary, the better to represent the actual condition of the market. Ordinary, strict ordinary and average good ordinary having advanced under a fair demand and scant supply, while strict good ordinary and the better grades were without any sensible change. The sales included ordinary at 12½c, strict ordinary to good ordinary at 15½c, good ordinary at 15⅞c and 15¾c, strict good ordinary at 16½, 16¾ and 16½c, and low middling at 17½c.

The sales of the past two days sum up 800 bales. Receipts since August 31, 594 bales, embracing 75 bales from Mobile, and 479 proper against 2335 last September. For all ports see statement below.

The amount on shipboard not cleared, going on board and engaged for shipment was set down at the opening this morning at 2600 bales, for the North, which when deducted from the stock on hand by our running statement last evening, leaves 5500 bales to represent the quantity at the landing and in presses unsold or awaiting orders.

The Exchange reports: "Market firm; supply scant." Its quotations for ordinary and good ordinary are raised ⅛c.

COTTON STATEMENT.
