Back at the Enemy. Richard Harding Davis said at a tea at Sherry's in New York: "The Germans, every time they take a drink, life their glasses solemnly and say, 'God punish England.' They say 'God punish England' when they meet and when they separate. Bills inscribed 'God punish England' are posted up in public places, and people all over Germany wear buttons and brooches with 'God punish England' written on them.

"That's one side of the picture, the German side. Here's the other side, the English side. 'I journeyed recently through a quaint English village. There was a bust of Blenheim on the village green. Beneath the bust the old village gardener had written: 'God forgive Germany!'—Exchange.

Most Obliging.

A street car was getting under way when two women rushing from opposite sides of the street to greet each other, met right in the middle of the car track and in front of the car, says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph. There the two stopped and began to talk. The car stopped too, but the women did not appear to realize that it was there. Certain of the passengers whose heads were immediately thrust out of the windows began to make sarcastic remarks, but the two women heeded them not.

Finally the motorman showed that he had a saving sense of humor. Leaning over the dashboard he inquired in the gentlest of tones: "Pardon me, ladies, but shall I get you a couple of chairs?"

Proof of True Love. Little Edna one day turned to her mother, who was a widow, and said: "Mamma, do you really and truly love me?"

"Why, of course, my dear. Why do you ask?"

"And will you prove it to me?"

"Yes, if I can."

"Then go marry the man around the corner who keeps the candy store."—Ladies' Home Journal.

FRENCH DEVELOPING MORROCCAN CITIES

Casablanca Fast Becoming Modern City With Broad Streets and Skyscrapers.

Casablanca, Morocco, Aug. 1.—(Associated Press Correspondence.)—Morocco, one of the biggest bones of contention between European powers, but lost to sight now in the general war, appears not to suffer from the neglect of diplomats. During the thick of the conflict French rule is developing its aim with rapidity.

Casablanca is building with the pace of a mushroom town of the west. In two years it has become a modern, model town with sewers, water, gas, electric lights, water, new quays, wharves and piers. This sudden growth of what in these parts is a town of skyscrapers awes and dominates the Moor, who watches it from his low gourbi or tent as though it were witchcraft.

Yesterday where the vegetation of the west African coast grew a feet high there are broad avenues stretching far from the casbah. The natives lined up, on either side look on lazily, marvelling at the zeal of the German prisoners-of-war putting the finishing touches to the pavements, and wondering or what it is all intended. Tomorrow more hotels, stores and villas will rise there, and as fast as the lots are taken up more avenues will be built. The town as now laid out would easily accommodate 200,000 inhabitants in addition to its regular population of 80,000.

The smoking chimneys of a big cement works, erected to facilitate building, and one more to the many marvels that have worked upon the minds of the Moors. So many of these marvels of French colonization have they seen that the departure of a considerable portion of the French troops has not in the least diminished French prestige. On the contrary, the participation of a considerable contingent of Moroccan native troops in the fight so far away has made it in a way "their war," while the five thousand Germans brought here in captivity are looked upon with a sort of local pride as "our prisoners."

There are many legends afloat as to the proportion of these men who were captured by Sid Mohammed, by the Calid El Hadj Kazan and other glories of the Moroccan "Goumiers."

Rabat, Kenitra, Marrakech, as well as Casablanca, are developing according to plans previously prepared in France, and with the same method although with less activity. While Casablanca is the metropolis of Morocco, Rabat has the honor of being the capital, temporarily at least. The new provisional government buildings are completed and new streets laid out in the form of an amphitheatre on the hill beside the Arg, town.

During the first year of the war thirty-three miles of railroad have been added to the line that, by way of Marrakech and Rabat will ultimately unite Casablanca and Fez. It was supposed that the construction of this line would require five or six years; it will have been completed in less than two, and when the line from Oujda to Taza has been prolonged to Fez, the French will have uninterrupted communication by rail from their Algerian, possessions, across Morocco, to the Atlantic.

These lines are narrow gauge military roads, easily convertible later, as circumstances may justify, into commercial lines. In addition to the railway lines, fine high roads have been built all along the coast from Casablanca to Kenitra, a comparatively new port, which by reason of its accessibility to Fez and the rich surrounding region is bound to have an important development. Another road on which German prisoners of war are working, from Casablanca to Mazagan, will be completed before the rainy season sets in, as well as the branch road to Mechlabon Abou, making serviceable routes along more than two hundred miles of fertile productive country that were heretofore impossible in the rainy season.

Why Long Farm Leases Pay.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside a contributor shows how many farms are poorly cultivated because the tenants are unable to get long time leases. Of the importance of long time leases, both to landlords and tenants, the writer of this article says in part: "Considering this tenant question, I venture to say that it is the most important question of this generation, owing to the roving disposition of the renters. A rolling stone gathers no moss, they say. The mowing of the soil—by which I mean, getting an m. a. out of the soil as you can and never putting anything back, as it is mostly practiced by one-year renters—and the difficulty of borrowing money just in time when everything is cheapest even though the renter has to sell to pay rent, all these things fill one with apprehension as to the future possibilities. There can be but one result, and that is abandoned farms, the children going to the cities or other parts of the country where land is cheaper."

PUT SULPHUR ON AN ITCHING SKIN AND END ECZEMA

Says this old-time Eczema remedy is applied like cold cream.

Any irritation or breaking out on the face, arms, legs or body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur, says a noted dermatologist.

He states that bold sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin. Those troubled should obtain at any drug store an ounce of bold-sulphur, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream.
